Impeachment case?—Demos probing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democratic leaders decided today to begin an inquiry into whether grounds exist to start impeachment proceedings against President Nixon.

The agreement, staving off for the time being a flood of impeachment resolutions introduced by Democrats, came at a closed meeting of the 23-member Democratic Steering Committee headed by Speaker Carl Albert.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, joined some other leading Democrats today in calling for the start of impeachment proceedings.

"The prospect of impeachment is awesome," Muskie said in prepared speech for an appearance at the University of Toledo (Ohio). "But the prospect of government lawlessness is worse."

"It is possible that before the process ever culminates in a Senate trial, we might find other means of resolving our crisis."

"But while we search for those avenues of accommodation, we should use the instruments the Constitution provides to set limits on the conduct of the President."

Eliot L. Richardson, who resigned as attorney general Saturday night rather than carry out Nixon's order to fire Cox, declined to say today whether he felt the President should be impeached. At a news conference, he said that decision must be made by the American people themselves. The House leaders agreed on a three-pronged approach in the wake of Nixon's weekend firing of the Watergate Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox:

—The House Judiciary Committee will start an inquiry to determine whether there are impeachable offenses to warrant actual impeachment hearings.

—The Judiciary Committee will also consider creation of a new prosecutor's office — independent of executive branch control, to continue the Cox investigations.

—The judiciary committee will also continue with its scheduled investigation and eventual hearings on Rep. Gerald R. Ford's nomination as Vice President.

However, House leaders moved today to stave off any immediate action by starting an inquiry into whether any grounds exist to open such proceedings.

Speaker Carl Albert, in his first public comment on the matter, said the firing of Cox was unfortunate but "For the Congress to act in a reckless or hasty manner would further engender national disunity."

Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., who has been calling for the start of impeachment proceedings, said he was against the inquiry approach.

"If there is one thing Congress has to do it is to respond to Nixon's actions," he said. "Halfway measures in responding will not satisfy the country."

Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., a member of the Democratic leadership team, said the group had devised a plan to forestall any move to get an immediate impeachment vote on the floor of the House.

"If any member... were to move for immediate consideration of a motion to impeach, someone representing the leadership then would move to refer it to the Judiciary Committee and the leadership would be supported in that motion," Wright said.

He said Albert wanted work begun on Ford's nomination before any impeachment proceedings move very far in committee.

Brown proposes Cox draft bill on impeachment

WASHINGTON — Rep. George Brown, D-38th Dist., says, he plans to introduce a resolution that would allow fired special prosecutor Archibald Cox to draft a "bill of particulars" for possible impeachment of the President.

However, Rep. Jerry Pettis, R-33rd Dist., today said, "There is not going to be any impeachment without more knowledge than we have today."

Both legislators represent districts in the Pomona Valley.

Brown's resolution, if passed by the House of Representatives, would direct Cox, using his present staff and as many additional employees as he needs, to devote his entire effort to drafting the bill of particulars. Cox and his staff would be on the Congressional payroll with orders to produce the draft.

Brown said he would consult with Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.D., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, before deciding whether to propose the Cox operation be placed under the committee or under the House at large.

Brown said it had become obvious that President Nixon feels Cox has evidence that is more dangerous to the President than the consequence of firing Cox and disbanding his office.

Brown said Nixon must have foreseen "this uproar" over firing Cox, but considered it would be "more disastrous" for Cox to continue investigating the possible White House role in the Watergate scandal.

He also had some harsher words for the President. Brown described him as "an unstable man fearful of his place in history." He said the chance of getting an impeachment through the House was "good."

Pettis said his colleagues in the House, including Democrats, know there is not enough evidence for impeachment.

"I'm not saying there won't be impeachment proceedings," Pettis said. "For those proceedings to take place there will have to be more evidence, and it could be that evidence is on the tapes."

Pettis said he wishes the President would give up the tapes to the authorities who are investigating the Watergate break-in.

At least 25 House Democrats had been making one-minute speeches on the House floor this morning, Pettis said, and from the talks he "would conclude before the day is out, or possibly tomorrow, there will probably be some action initiated by the Democrats."

He said, however, that he is not sure what the action will be, but "neither do the Democrats."

Pettis acknowledged he was "shocked" over the firing of Cox, and "deeply regretted that my very good friend Mr. Richardson (Eliot Richardson, former attorney general) has resigned."

"I was a little shocked over the weekend at the dismissal of Mr. Cox because when he was confirmed by the Senate the President said he would not stand in his way in the investigation of the Watergate situation," Pettis said.

Pettis also said that House Democratic leaders, including Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., were not too certain about starting impeachment proceedings.

Phnom Penh food convoy in safely

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — A convoy of 230 trucks pushed up Highway 4 without rebel resistance to Phnom Penh Monday, bringing rice and other goods from the deep water port of Kompong Som, the high command said today.

HAPPY... YESTERDAY

The Mideast cease-fire Monday brought smiles from two grizzled and tired Israeli soldiers. They poked their heads out of a trench on the Egyptian side of the Suez Canal to make victory signs. The cease-fire didn't last long, though. Egyptian and Israel forces have renewed the fighting.

Nixon attorney defends firing of Cox, prepares for court hearing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon paid "hideous costs" in firing Archibald Cox as Watergate special prosecutor, the President's constitutional lawyer said today. But he said the action — triggering demands for Nixon's resignation or impeachment — was necessary.

Charles Alan Wright, Nixon's temporary, special consultant on the Watergate tapes issue, defended the President's position as he and other White House lawyers prepared a "response of the President" for a federal court on the matter.

Wright frankly conceded that Nixon had violated an April 30 promise to give Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson absolute authority to make Watergate decisions, but said that was before the tapes issue that precipitated the current crisis arose.

The President's lawyers prepared an explanation of Nixon's proposed tapes compromise for Judge John J. Sirica who on Aug. 29 ordered the tapes to be turned over to him — a decision subsequently upheld by an appeals court.

Sirica called in two grand juries that are investigating Watergate and related matters and told them this morning to "press forward" with their work.

With obvious reference to Nixon's move doing away with the office of special prosecutor, Sirica told the jurors: "You remain operative and intact. You are still grand jurors and the grand juries still function."

"You are not dismissed and will not be dismissed except by this court on completion of your work. You must be prepared to press forward."

Sirica told the grand juries — one formed in June, 1972, just after the Watergate burglary and one empaneled last August — they should "be patient." He added, "In due course, the questions that now plague us will be resolved."

grand jury to fill the void left by Cox, whose discharge was ordered by President Nixon Saturday.

Sirica, responding immediately, said "if the court feels it is necessary," to appoint a successor to Cox, it is prepared to do it without outside assistance.

Sirica summoned the grand jurors to explain "your present status... First, you remain operative and intact. You are still grand jurors and the grand juries still function."

"You are not dismissed and will not be dismissed except by this court on completion of your work. You must be prepared to press forward."

Will appoint successor to Cox if necessary, Judge says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica said Tuesday that "if necessary" he would appoint a replacement for Archibald Cox, fired Saturday as special Watergate prosecutor.

Sirica made known his willingness to act independently as he assembled members of both Watergate grand juries to tell them they are still in business despite Cox's dismissal and to urge them to "press forward" with their investigations of misconduct in the 1972 presidential campaigns.

Prof. John F. Banzhaf III of George Washington University's National Law Center asked Sirica to hear his proposal to appoint a special counsel to the ## Future of U.S. at stake--Richardson

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson declined to say today whether he felt President Nixon should be impeached. That decision, he said, must be made by the American people themselves.

At a nationally televised news conference from the Great Hall in the Justice Department, Richardson said "the future well-being and security of our beloved country" is at stake in how the nation judges Nixon's actions in discharging Watergate Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox.

Asked if he would have done what Cox did in rejecting the tapes compromise proposed by the White House,

Richardson said: "I would have done what he has done."

Richardson said he felt compelled to resign Saturday night rather than carry out Nixon's instruction to fire Cox because "at stake was the very integrity of the governmental process I came to the department to restore."

At his confirmation hearing last May, Richardson gave the senators his personal pledge that Cox would have complete independence to investigate Watergate no matter where the matter led and would not be removed except for "extraordinary improprieties."

Richardson told newsmen he had full confidence that the Watergate investigation would be adequately handled by Henry E. Petersen, assistant attorney general in charge of the department's criminal division. Petersen has been promised a free hand by Robert H. Bork, the acting attorney general.

Justice Department employees lined the walls of the hall and greeted Richardson with vigorous applause as he entered.

Richardson declined to discuss reports that Cox's removal had been sought by Nixon since June and that the President deliberately set in motion the course of events which led to his discharge Saturday.

Richardson denied one report that he had been ordered a week ago to fire Cox.

Egypt and Israel renew fighting with full fury

By United Press International

Both sides resumed the Middle East war in full fury Tuesday, shattering a cease-fire that was barely 12 hours old.

Israel renewed its offensive in Egypt, sent spearheads to within 37 miles of Cairo and proclaimed that victory was almost complete. Cairo said only that heavy fighting had broken out and that Israel started it.

Egypt summoned the United Nations Security Council into emergency session at noon EDT to hear its complaint that Israel had violated the cease-fire ordered by the Council early Monday after the United States and Soviet Union worked out in Moscow their first superpower end-the-war agreement.

Pentagon sources said the fighting Tuesday involved two Egyptian tank thrusts along both sides of the Suez Canal aimed at cutting off the Israeli crossing point into Egypt and another epic tank battle in the Sinai Desert on the east bank of the canal.

The Pentagon sources said Egypt struck twice with its air force but was turned back both times by the Israeli air force with the Egyptians losing 11 planes in dogfights and the Israelis three. Israel has destroyed or captured many SAM missile sites on the west bank and correspondents said few were being fired now.

Heavy ground and air fighting was reported on the west bank of the canal inside Egypt where the Israelis said Egypt counterattacked with tanks Tuesday and on the Sinai Desert where there were artillery duels and the major tank battle. Egypt said it went into action after Israel broke the truce.

The Syrian front was reported quiet after a series of air battles this morning.

Cause of the breakdown of the cease-fire in this fourth Middle East War in 25 years could not be pinpointed in view of the conflicting claims. But dispatches from Tel Aviv said the Israeli military command believed the continuation would give its generals the extra round they needed to deal a knockout blow to the Arabs.

"Syria's army has been badly beaten and Egypt's is close to defeat," Lt. Gen. David Elazar, the Israeli chief of the armed forces, said in an order of the day to his troops. "We have emerged victorious, although our victory is not yet complete."

Vote turnout light in Chino tax election

CHINO — The turnout of voters for the Chino tax override election was a light three per cent this morning after the eight polling precincts had been open for three hours.

Approximately 183 of 5,445 total registered voters had been to the polls by 10 a.m. to cast an opinion on the financing for the construction of city facilities in the new Civic Center. The turnout was highest at Gird Elementary School with 42.

In order for the tax increase of 25 cents per $100 assessed valuation to pass, a majority vote is required.

Polls will be open until 7 p.m. today at Magnolia Junior High, Ramona Junior High, Gird Elementary, Marshall, Newman, El Rancho and Chino High schools and the school district office.

Special valley election set to fill Sen. Coombs' post

SACRAMENTO — A special election to choose a successor to fill the vacant seat of State Sen. William E. Coombs, R-20th Dist., will be Dec. 18, Gov. Ronald Reagan announced Monday.

There will be no primary election beforehand to select a candidate from either the Democratic or Republican party. All candidates will be grouped into the same contest.

However, if no candidate wins a majority on that date, a runoff election will be held Jan. 15, a week after the Legislature reconvenes for the second half of its 1973-74 session.

Coombs announced his resignation Friday to take a post with the U.S. Treasury Department.

His departure gave Democrats a thin 20-19 edge over Republicans in the Senate. The 20th Senate District, which includes the Pomona Valley cities of Ontario, Montclair, Upland and Chino, currently is 55.6 per cent Democratic registration and 39.1 per cent Republican.

San Bernardino County Supervisor Ruben Ayala, a Democrat, has already announced his candidacy. Ayala said that he had been informed by Sen. George N. Zenovich, D-16th Dist., that he (Ayala) was the strongest candidate in the 20th District.

Other potential Democratic candidates include Assemblyman John Quimby, D-72nd Dist.; Nancy Smith, chairman of the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors; and David Brownell, mayor of Victorville.

Possible Republican contenders include Assemblyman Jerry Lewis, R-73rd Dist., and County Supervisor Daniel Mikesell of Ontario. Howard Snyder, mayor of Ontario who lost to Rep. George Brown, D-38th Dist., in the 1972 congressional elections, said Saturday he will not run for the vacant Senate position.

Coombs has not formally endorsed anyone to succeed him, but he has indicated that he considers Lewis the Republican heir-apparent to the job.

Congress can't decide about impeachment

By DON PHILLIPS
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress is undecided about whether to begin impeachment proceedings against President Nixon although there is widespread disapproval of his firing of Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox, a UPI poll indicated today.

Republicans, who might normally be expected to rally to the President, showed greater indecision than Democrats, and some normally key GOP Nixon supporters said they would withhold judgment until after more facts are in.

Although more members of the House and Senate favored the start of impeachment proceedings than opposed it, about half of those contacted indicated they were undecided about what to do.

A substantial number of congressmen, including many of those who opposed impeachment proceedings, registered disagreement with Nixon's decision to discharge Cox. A number of Republicans said they felt Nixon's actions were wrong, but were insufficient to warrant impeachment.

All House and Senate members who could be contacted—more than half of both bodies—were asked: "Would you favor the beginning of impeachment proceedings against the President?"

In the House, which would have to initiate any impeachment proceedings, 65 favored the idea (59 Democrats and five Republicans), 50 were opposed (13 Democrats and 37 Republicans) and 107 were undecided (49 Democrats and 58 Republicans).

In the Senate, which would try any articles of impeachment brought by the House, 19 were in favor (17 Democrats and two Republicans), 11 were opposed (two Democrats and nine Republicans) and 35 were undecided (19 Democrats and 16 Republicans).

The two Republican senators favoring impeachment proceedings are Sens. Clifford Case of New Jersey and Edward Brooke of Massachusetts. The six GOP House members in favor are Reps. Paul McCloskey, Calif., Richard Mallery, Vt., Charles Whalen, Ohio, Lawrence Williams, Pa., Joshua Eilberg, Pa., who favors looking into the situation but not necessarily impeachment proceedings.

The patterns of support and opposition for impeachment did not always follow normal political patterns.

For instance, Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., with the strongest record of support for Nixon programs in the House, said that although he did not favor impeachment proceedings now, Congress should form a committee of inquiry to determine whether impeachment is appropriate.

Rep. William B. Widnall, R-N.J., who normally can be expected to support Nixon consistently, said he would seriously consider advocating impeachment proceedings if warranted by an investigation of the weekend's events.

Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott said he would not discuss the impeachment question, but "I do not support the firing of Archibald Cox."

A good portion of the undecided said they would prefer to wait for U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica to determine whether Nixon will be charged with contempt.

A worry for some Republicans was that the furor over the tapes would block the nomination of Rep. Gerald Ford, R-Mich., to become vice president.

Here is a sampling of congressional comments on the impeachment question:

—Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn.: "It's hard as hell to resist the inclination that he (Nixon) is guilty as hell."

—Rep. Donald Fraser, D-Minn.: The President has made a "mockery of the Constitution and our system of government and law."

—Rep. James M. Hanley, D-N.Y.: "The President owes the people a prompt and full explanation of his actions and, if he doesn't do this in a satisfactory manner, the Congress will have no choice but to move in the direction of impeachment."

—Rep. Thad Cochran, R-Miss.: "It strikes me that the same people that are crying for Nixon's resignation and urging impeachment are the same ones that wanted (Sen. George S.) McGovern to be President."

—Rep. Dan Kuykendall, R-Tenn.: "It sounds like a lynching party to me. I think Cox was interested in the President's neck, not the truth."

—Rep. James Symington, D-Mo.: "I look forward to having the House consider the matter at the earliest possible time, and with dispatch."

—Rep. Lawrence Williams, R-Pa.: "Studying the facts I presently have, I would be inclined to vote for impeachment. I see no other course that can be taken at the present. However, I don't want to hear any talk about impeachment until Gerald Ford is confirmed by the House and Senate as vice president."

—Rep. Elford A. Cederberg, R-Mich.: "I can't see any grounds for impeachment proceedings. Everyone was satisfied with the compromise except Cox. God, Cox doesn't run the government."

—Rep. William D. Ford, D-Mich.: "I wouldn't have been surprised if he (Nixon) had ordered out the army. Watching what's going on in Washington is like watching a weird movie about a banana republic."

—Rep. Ray Roberts, D-Tex.: "I think we will now be compelled to listen to the ones who want to impeach him. His precipitous action has caused many people who were behind him to question whether he really had something to hide."

ISRAELIS ON THE MOVE

Military vehicles carrying Israeli troops roll into Egypt today after crossing the Suez Canal despite cease-fire which went into effect Monday. Both sides hurled charges of breaking the cease-fire.

People in today's news

Cynic who would laugh at the world

DANBURY, Conn. (UPI) — Clifford Irving says that if he had gotten away with his hoax of writing an autobiography of Howard Hughes he would have laughed at the world, "but not maliciously."

Irving, serving a sentence in a federal correctional institution for the affair, told the Danbury News-Times in a written interview Monday that he still finds the whole hoax "exhilarating from beginning to end."

He said if he had been able to pull it off "I would have laughed because I would have seen, for about the 1,000th time in my life, that the world and its creatures and its pretenses are absurd."

Jan Peerce falls; taken to hospital

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Opera tenor Jan Peerce was hospitalized for a possible leg fracture Monday after slipping and falling at the home of his daughter.

Peerce, 65, New York, was at the home of Mrs. Robert Wahrhaftig in nearby Orinda when the accident occurred Sunday.

Could be life somewhere else

DELAWARE, Ohio (UPI) — Robert Dixon, assistant director of the Perkins Observatory, said today there could be life elsewhere in the universe.

Dixon said scientists today can make amino acids and with an electrical charge create life in laboratories, and the same elements on Earth are found in many places in the universe.

Dixon currently is working on a project to adapt the receiving equipment at the observatory to pick up possible radio signals from other intelligent civilizations.

Lakey trial jury back on the job

POMONA — The jury in the second murder trial here of Lee Donald Lakey resumed deliberation this morning after a three-day weekend away from the case.

The panel of seven women and five men was sent home late Friday afternoon by Superior Court Judge Glenn M. Pfau. The members received the case a week ago today after almost three weeks of testimony.

Lakey, 22, was accused of strangling 19-year-old Cheryl P. Brown in her apartment Jan. 13. His first trial here ended in a mistrial after six days of deliberation. That trial lasted almost six weeks.

Verdicts possible in the case are innocent, first- or second-degree murder and voluntary or involuntary manslaughter.

Why cease-fire broke down — an analysis

TEL AVIV (UPI) — It is clear that the Israeli military command thought it had the Egyptian army on the ropes and wanted no part of a ceasefire until the knockout blow was delivered.

The current continuation of fighting on the southern front in Egypt may give the generals the extra round they were hoping for.

Maj. Gen. Shlomo Gazit emphasized at a pre-truce news briefing that the decision to accept the U.N. Security Council proposal was a political one.

He said the army would have needed only a few more days to throw the Egyptians off their last footholds on the east bank of the Suez Canal and therefore to defeat them completely.

Even as the all-out Israeli offensive resumed today in response to what the Israelis said were Egyptian counterattacks, headquarters was predicting the cease-fire will take hold in two or three days.

On the southern theater, that is. In the north the Syrians have not accepted the Security Council proposal — and the command reckons it still has a war on its hands there.

The Egyptian counterthrust is aimed at reducing Israel's bulge toward Cairo and at restoring the capital's links with Suez city, its backdoor port to Africa and Asia and its source for oil from the gulf of Saudi Arabia.

Once this effort is defeated, according to officers in the Israeli command, the Egyptians probably will stop fighting. But they may have suffered serious setbacks in the meantime.

How the cease-fire will be policed along the lines inside Egypt, some within 37 miles of the capital, is left for the politicians to decide.

As for Syria, there are predictions that the war on that front will die a quiet death and fall into a tacit cease-fire if not an official one.

In Israeli eyes, the wild card in the deck is the Soviet Union.

Even though the Kremlin leadership cooperated with the United States in arranging the cease-fire, it is reported still pouring arms and ammunition into the Arab world.

Already, according to the military command, $2.5 billion worth of Soviet weaponry has been destroyed or lost.

Having accused the Soviets of planning this war, the Israelis are keenly suspicious that the Kremlin materiel still reaching Arab ports and airfields is to be used against them despite the cease-fire.

Unlike the end of the 1967 war which left Israelis and Egyptians in clearcut lines facing each other across the Suez Canal, Monday's ceasefire found them in hopelessly confused battlefield positions.

West of the canal the Israelis hold a large bulge pushing deep like a cancerous tumor into the heart of Egypt, covering 500 square miles and at points less than 40 miles from Cairo.

Isolated Egyptian pockets which the Israelis did not have time to mop up before the cease-fire, still are holding out inside the bulge.

The main road from Cairo to Ismailia on the Suez canal is cut by the Israelis.

On the East bank of the Canal the Egyptians still hold a bridgehead five to eight miles wide and stretching along about one-half of the waterway.

The Israelis look down on the Egyptian troops there from high ground east of the canal.

In Syria neither Israelis nor Syrians had gained a clearcut result in the battle for possession of Mount Hermon.

The great peak, snow capped for more than half the year, looks down into Israel's rich Huleh valley settlements in northern Galilee.

On the other side it dominates the approaches to Damascus.

Whoever holds Mount Hermon holds from Moscow after working out the cease-fire with Soviet leaders. Kissinger appeared at the White House less than seven hours later and met soon afterward with the President.

Nixon spent the night at his Camp David retreat with his wife, presumably pondering his next moves in the crisis atmosphere that has prevailed in Washington since he ordered the firing

Saturday night of Special Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox.

While some members of Congress — and others — were calling for Nixon's resignation or impeachment, the President's aides pictured him as calm and confident that he would ride out the controversy as his position became funding under the Emergency School Aid clearer.

One official — while conceding that criticism was heavy from all sides — said: "I trust that in all the flow of news on Watergate, the delicacy of this (Mideast) diplomatic achievement will not be overlooked."

The cease-fire arrangement worked out by Kissinger and Soviet leaders raised hopes of an end to the new fighting, and appeared to be working when Kissinger left Tel Aviv after meeting with Israeli leaders. But less than an hour after Kissinger reached Washington, general fighting resumed amid charges of violations by both sides.

While Nixon concerned himself with the Mideast, aides were busy contacting members of Congress and others to reverse what they admitted was a surprisingly one-sided reaction against the President's ouster of Cox.

Hearing to open on federal aid

POMONA — The Board of Education during its 7:30 meeting tonight in the Education Center, 800 S. Garey Ave., will hold a public hearing on an application for some $750,000 to $1 million in federal emergency aid assistance for 1974-75.

The school district has received information indicating it is eligible for funding under the Emergency School Aid Act. The federal program, administered by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, is available to school districts that meet federal requirement for being desegregated. The hearing is the first of several expected.

the strategic key to the Syrian-Israeli border area.

In such confused and untidy battlefield situations it would have been almost a miracle if fighting had not erupted again.

Another major, perhaps decisive factor was the fact that when the cease-fire was imposed on the two reluctant sides, neither had won a clearcut military victory.

In 1967 when a cease-fire was ordered, Israel already had destroyed the armies and air forces of her three Arab neighbors.

They were beaten, on their knees and militarily in no position to defend themselves if the fighting had continued.

This time, despite the bloodshed and huge losses of planes, tanks and artillery by both sides, neither can be said to be on the brink of total defeat.

A cease-fire breakdown, even a temporary one, in these circumstances ap-

School budget workshop set in Claremont

CLAREMONT — A program-accounting workshop will be held at Oakmont School Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

The meeting has been planned to inform the school board and other citizens of the implementation of a new state accounting manual and requirements that should make financial information more meaningful to the school district staff and the public.

The Oakmont School staff will be on hand to discuss how it divided the school's budget funds into various instructional programs and also allotted funds according to a traditional budget.

Each school ultimately will be able to determine the cost of educational programs per student.

The major change in accounting will be the allocating of funds from a function such as supplies to a program.

The Oakmont staff allocated funds for nine instructional programs such as English, mathematics and reading, and five support programs including school administration, instructional media and health services.

Under the old accounting system, categories in the budget included books, materials, equipment, furniture and salaries.

Armed man robs massage parlor here

POMONA — A gunman robbed the Sultan's Palace, a massage parlor at 705 N. Garey Ave., early today.

An employee, Elmira J. Jefferson, 21, Ontario, said she and four other women employees were asleep shortly after 3 a.m. when the man entered the lobby and rang a bell on the counter. She met him and after a few moments he pulled a pistol and demanded money. After being given the cash, the robber fled. He was described as a Negro about 24, 5 feet 7 weighing 140 pounds. He wore a brown fur coat, dark trousers and black shoes.

Armed bandit gets cash at Ontario mart

ONTARIO — A lone gunman robbed the owner of Jesse's Market, 606 E. Francis Ave. Monday morning and escaped with a small amount of cash, police reported.

Police said the gunman walked into the market owned by Jesse Rubalcava about 9:26 a.m. He pulled a snub-nosed .38-caliber pistol from underneath a black jacket and ordered Rubalcava to hand over the cash from the register. Rubalcava said the robber ran east on Francis.

The robber was described as a Negro, 20, 5 feet 10, with a medium build, wearing a black shirt and red pants.

CLAREMONT FACILITY

Stout reinforcing rods frame the outline of the new $475,000 10,000-square-foot Claremont police facility which will front on Bonita Avenue between Cornell and Berkeley avenues. A plumbing crew digs for a water line to serve the radiation-proof station.

Construction of the building is hidden from Bonita Avenue traffic by a high concrete block wall which once concealed city yard facilities. The wall, of course, will come down when the project is completed.

Woman handcuffed in robbery attempt

ONTARIO — Three men, one armed with a revolver, walked into an apartment at 1360 E. D St. and handcuffed a woman with plastic handcuffs in an attempted armed robbery Monday night, police reported.

Police said that the three men attempted to remove a stereo set from the apartment, but the victim, Mrs. Elmira G. Jefferson, 21, managed to get free of the handcuffs and run to a neighbor who called police.

Mrs. Jefferson said she heard a knock on her door about 8 p.m. and on answering, found two men at the door asking for her husband. She said her husband was not at home and the two men left. A few minutes later the men returned to her door and knocked again. Mrs. Jefferson said she opened the door but could not hear what the men were saying because of the stereo. She went to turn the stereo down, and when she turned to face the men, one of them pointed a revolver at her.

She said that a third man entered the apartment holding about 10 pairs of toy plastic handcuffs and black tape. Mrs. Jefferson said they handcuffed her hands behind her and took her into the kitchen. The men apparently were trying to unplug the stereo when Mrs. Jefferson managed to get free of the plastic handcuffs and run outside to summon help from a neighbor. She said the three men left, getting into a 1970 Oldsmobile, and drove away without the stereo.

Police said the three men were described as Caucasians, in their early 20s. The first was wearing a plaid shirt, with a white T-shirt underneath, and had shoulder length brown hair. The second man, holding the revolver, was wearing blue jeans and had blond hair. The third man, who was carrying the handcuffs and tape, was wearing a beige V-necked sweater.

Bike, police car collide; boy injured

ONTARIO — An Ontario youth reportedly suffered minor injuries Monday when his bicycle collided with a police car which was backing from a private driveway.

Mike Basinger, 11, of 1215 S. Bonita Ave., was taken to San Antonio Community Hospital in Upland for treatment, said highway patrolmen.

The accident occurred in the 1500 block of S. Euclid Avenue. Officer Wayne Hurte of the Ontario Police Department was driver of the car.

Basinger was riding north on the sidewalk when he collided with the police car, officers added.

Burglar loots Claremont home

CLAREMONT — A burglar forced the front door lock at 4025 Tenango St. Monday morning, entered the house and carried off a color television set, a portable black-and-white set and a sewing machine. The victim, Patricia R. Schlesinger, told sheriff's deputies she was away only about 1½ hours. She estimated the loss at $750.

Light rain hits valley; wind in north

A storm that brought strong winds and thunderstorms to Northern California late Monday brought light rain to the Pomona Valley early this morning. Clear cool weather is expected tonight and sunny skies and warmer temperatures Wednesday.

Forecaster Bill Hackel of the National Weather Service said the storm passed through Pomona Valley this morning. Some cloudiness may prevail tonight but no more rainfall is expected.

The high temperature today should reach 67 degrees followed by a low tonight of 47 degrees. The forecast Wednesday is for 72 degrees. Afternoon temperatures of 79 degrees are normal for this time of year.

Monday's high was 68 degrees in Pomona and this morning's low was 54 degrees, according to the weather observation station at Cal Poly.

Gusting winds in San Francisco Monday blew material off the top of a 30-story building under construction forcing police to close off the area. The city received one inch of rain there from the storm.

Showers were occurring this morning in the northern part of the state and in the San Joaquin Valley but are expected to end tonight.

Travelers' advisories were posted in some desert areas today where winds reached 40 miles per hour. Small craft advisories were posted from Point Conception to Newport Beach for shifting winds which reached 30 knots at times.

Trash pickup on schedule; well, almost

Refuse collectors in Upland observed Monday as a holiday but other Pomona Valley citizens will have refuse collection picked up on regular schedule this week.

Officials at Upland City Hall said this morning that refuse collection was one day later today in that city but the disposal units are doubling up on routes and it is hoped that service will be on regular schedule by Wednesday. Persons missed on today's schedule will be serviced Wednesday.

Chino officials said an additional truck will be dispatched today through neighborhoods that missed Monday's pickup.

Claremont resident who missed Monday's refuse collection may arrange to have rubbish picked up by calling 624-4531, extension, 229.

Other cities on regular refuse pickup schedule this week include Pomona, La Verne, Walnut and Montclair.

Woman died of brain or liver injuries

POMONA — Luna Pearl Welton died of a brain injury or a damaged liver, an autopsy revealed Monday at the Los Angeles County Coroner's Office.

Mrs. Welton died sometime early Sunday in bed at 425 Randy St. Two men, her common-law husband, Mack Hillard Lewis, 31, and William Ray Sparks, 30, were arrested on suspicion of murder in her death.

The coroner's surgeon said that either injury could have killed her. The brain injury resulted in hemorrhage and the ruptured liver resulted in internal bleeding. Both injuries were caused by heavy blows.

Investigators today planned to submit their findings to the district attorney's office for the possible issuance of complaints in the case.

Police were called to the Randy Street address Sunday morning by Sparks, a Van Nuys mechanic. He showed them the victim's body in a blood-stained bedroom. Police said she had been badly battered and that both eyes had been blackened and were swollen shut.

Sparks said there had been a party there Saturday night and Lewis, a custodian, was quoted as saying he and Mrs. Welton had argued and exchanged blows before retiring.

Appraiser to talk on Proposition 1

POMONA — Ernest Waite, principal appraiser for the Los Angeles County Assessor's Office, will discuss Proposition 1 at a breakfast meeting Wednesday of the Kiwanis Club of Greater Pomona.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 a.m. in Buffums' Palmers Room. Waite is a member of the speakers bureau of Californians for Lower Taxes.

"The Revenue Control and Tax Reduction Initiative would permanently reduce and limit the tax burden of the people of California so that they can keep a larger percentage of the money they earn," Waite contends.

"Single individuals whose adjusted gross income is less than $4,000 and married couples and heads of households whose adjusted gross income is less than $8,000 would not have to pay a personal income tax if the constitutional amendment is adopted."

MAY HAPPEN AGAIN — The possibility exists that for the second time in the history of the United States Congress will seriously consider impeaching a president to remove him from office. Andrew Johnson, left, the 17th president, was impeached in 1868, but not convicted. President Nixon, right, faces possible impeachment over the firing of Archibald Cox.

Youth hurt as car hits tree, stump
CHINO — A Corona youth was injured Tuesday when a car in which he was a passenger struck a tree and a tree stump.
David Baleras, 17, was admitted to the Chino General Hospital where his condition today is termed serious.
Armando Costa, 18, of Corona was driving the car north on Archibald Avenue at excessive speed and failed to negotiate a curve, said highway patrolmen.
The car went off the roadway, then skidded back across the street before hitting a tree, spinning around and hitting a tree stump, officers added.

Chicago-area residents favor impeachment
CHICAGO (UPI) — A survey showed about 52 per cent of Chicago-area residents favor impeachment of President Nixon and 72 per cent disapprove of the way he is doing his job, the Chicago Daily News said Monday in a copy-righted story.

Of 200 persons interviewed in a survey by Daily News researchers, 38 per cent were against impeachment and 10 per cent had no opinion, the story said. The telephone check showed the President with an all-time low of 17 per cent approving of the way he is handling his job, the Daily News said.
Asked if Nixon should make the Watergate tapes public, 74 per cent said "yes," he should," and 19 per cent said "no." Forty-two per cent of the Daily News respondents said the President should resign, but 36 per cent said he should not.

Santa Ana feels quake
SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — A slight earthquake, registering less than 3.5 on the Richter scale, jiggled this Orange County community Monday night but no damage was reported.
Seismologist at Cal Tech in Pasadena said the tremor, which occurred at 9:58 p.m., was so small it failed to set off the warning light on their instruments, which activates when a quake is above a 3.5 magnitude. They did not have a precise reading of the magnitude.
The Police Department said it received only a few calls from residents, who said they felt the tremor for five or six seconds.

Nobel Prizes are shared in physics and chemistry

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — A German, Ernst Fischer of Munich and an Englishman, Geoffrey Wilkinson of the University of London today shared the 1973 Nobel Prize for Chemistry, the Royal Academy announced.

Two Americans, Ivar Giaever of the General Electric Company in Schenectady, N.Y., and Leo Esaki of International Business Machines, New York, and Brian Josephson of Cambridge, England, won the 1973 Nobel Physics prize, the academy said.

The chemistry award cited Fischer, of the Technical University of Munich, and Wilkinson for their pioneering work, performed independently, on the chemistry of the organometallic so-called "sandwich compounds."

Fischer, 55, was educated at the Munich Technical University and in 1969 became director of the university's inorganic chemistry laboratory.
Wilkinson, 52, was educated in London and now is a professor of inorganic chemistry at the Imperial College of Science and Technology of the University of London.

The academy said the prize this year was in "chemistry for chemists," and explained "a very essential part of scientific discipline is its structure and its concepts."
Fischer and Wilkinson widened the basic concepts of chemistry by their work and therefore also changed the structure of chemistry."

Their study investigated how organic and metallic atoms can merge with one another although there is not yet any practical use for the method, according to Professor Gunnar Brusewitz of the Swedish Academy.
Brusewitz said, however, "It may mean that the present lead in gasoline can be replaced with less dangerous metallic ingredients, creating less risks of exhaust pollution in large cities."

He stressed the chemistry of organometallic compounds was still in the experimental stage. "For the first time in many years, we have awarded a prize for pure basic chemistry research, not for methods or discoveries that border both to the biological and physical fields," he said.

The Academy quoted one of the nominators for this year's award as saying, "It is the considered opinion of the nominator that the work of Fischer and Wilkinson has revolutionized transition metal chemistry during the past two decades."

They will share the $122,000 prize.
For the Physics Prize the academy cited Esaki and Giaever for their work with semiconductors and superconductors and Josephson for his theoretical predictions of the properties of supercurrent through a tunnel barrier, particularly phenomena called "Josephson effects."

Giaever, reached by telephone at his home in Schenectady, N.Y., said, "It was for some work I did in superconductivity, but I haven't heard any details yet."
Giaever, 44, said he has been with General Electric Co. at least 15 years.

"I was born in Norway but I've been living in the United States for about 20 years," he said. He said he became a U.S. citizen about 10 years ago.

He said the work was done about 10 years ago at the General Electric Research Laboratory in Schenectady.

"What I have done is marrying tunneling to superconductivity."

Giaever and his wife have four children, ranging in age from 19 to 7, he said.

Giaever received his doctoral degree in physics from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy in 1964.

In Yorktown Heights, N.Y., Esaki said he was "overwhelmed" and "surprised" and thought "at first it was all a joke."

"I got the first indication at 7:30 a.m. when a newsman called me from New York and told me I won," Esaki said, gradually raising his voice over the ringing of telephones and rushing about of people in his office at IBM's Thomas J. Watson Research Center in Yorktown Heights in Westchester County.

"My family is so excited."

Esaki specifically got the prize for his work in the mid to late 1950s on the tunneling effects of electrons in semiconductors in that he was the first to demonstrate the "tunneling" of an electron through a semiconductor and also built the Tunnel Diode (also known as the Esaki diode), which is based on this tunneling effect.

The Esaki diode is used in high frequency devices such as television sets, radios and communication equipment, Esaki said.

Esaki, 48, born in Osaka, Japan, received his physics doctorate in Tokyo in 1959. He is an IBM "fellow" at the Yorktown Heights laboratory.

He joined IBM at that Yorktown Heights Laboratory in 1960. The laboratory is the headquarters for IBM's research division.

For his work on the so-called tunneling phenomena in solids, Esaki has already won the Morris N. Liebmann Prize of the Institute of Electronics and Electrical Engineers and the Ballantine Award from the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia, according to the IBM spokesman.

Esaki is married, lives in Chappaqua, N.Y., in Westchester County and has three children, two girls and boy, ranging in age from 8 to 13 years old.

Jordan to boycott 4 airlines

AMMAN (UPI) — Jordan will boycott four European airlines accused of transporting volunteers and ammunition to Israel, official sources said today. They identified the airlines as Air France, Lufthansa, Sabena and KLM.

NEW DELHI (UPI) — India sent a team of 10 doctors and 10 tons of drugs to Syria today. A government spokesman said the aid was in response to a request from Syria for urgent medical assistance.

BEIRUT (UPI) — Libyan Premier Maj. Abdel Salam Jalloud arrived in Cairo early today for a visit that may be connected with the Middle East cease-fire, the Iraqi News Agency reported from Cairo.

Libya has rejected the cease-fire. President Anwar Sadat conferred in Cairo Monday with Egyptian Deputy Premier Mamdouh Salem and directed him to carry messages to Libyan and Algerian heads of state.

SEOUL (UPI) — South Korea welcomes a cease-fire in the Middle East war and hope that a genuine peace will be guaranteed permanently in the area," he said.

Schabarum heads tax ceiling group
LOS ANGELES — Peter F. Schabarum, 1st District County supervisor and chairman of the board, will head a group of county officials in support of Gov. Ronald Reagan's tax ceiling initiative.

Schabarum said the Nov. 6 ballot proposal is the "taxpayers' best hope for limiting the size and cost of government."

The former Covina assemblyman was appointed to the Los Angeles board by Reagan 2½ years ago. Schabarum subsequently was elected to the seat vacated by the death of Supervisor Frank Bonelli.

Norman Topping, chairman of Californians for Lower Taxes, named Schabarum to head the Los Angeles County Officials for Lower Taxes.

Casals-in death--in rebuke of Spain

Christian burial at the Puerto Rican Memorial Cemetery in Isla Verde was to be preceded by an afternoon mass officiated by Cardinal Luis Aponte Martinez at La Piedad Catholic Church.

Plans called for Casals' "Song of the Birds" to be played at the mass as the maestro requested.
The Catalan maestro moved to Puerto Rico, homeland of his mother, in 1957 with his Puerto Rican wife, Marta Montanez. He became a beloved institution, founding the Puerto Rico Conservatory of Music, the Puerto Rican Symphony Orchestra and the annual Casals Festival.

Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon proclaimed three days of official mourning for Casals, and ordered U.S. and Puerto Rican flags flown at half-staff throughout Puerto Rico.

With characteristic Latin fervor, Hernandez Colon said in his Monday proclamation: "A giant has died. A giant in music, giant in liberty, a giant in peace. He died in Puerto Rico, land of his mother who inspired his art, land of liberty, land of peace. This people, which is honored to have him among us, which grew with his music and was vitalized by his inspiration, today weeps at his death and opens its heart to receive him in our insides on his trip to eternity."

At Monday night's wake, Marta's brothers carried the gold casket into the living room of the maestro's suburban home. Marta Montanez de Casals, 36, stood at the position of honor, in a long-sleeved black dress, holding the Catalan red and yellow multi-striped flag in one hand and the lone star Puerto Rican tricolor in the other. She blinked back tears.

The closed casket was placed between two gigantic red floor candles. A cello replica of red and white carnations and a crucifix were placed atop the casket.

In a corner atop a closed black piano lay Don Pablo's cello, a sad reminder of the departure of a genius.

On the walls were oil paintings of Marta, the maestro, Bach and Beethoven, and a collection of caricatures of Casals.

'Holy Toledo'

In the expression "Holy Toledo," Toledo refers to Toledo, Spain, one of the great centers of Christian culture after its liberation from the Moors in 1085. Its Gothic cathedral is the seat of the Cardinal Archbishop of Spain.

Youth hostel planning bike trip to Big Bear

CLAREMONT — The local American Youth Hostel group is sponsoring a bicycling trip to Big Bear Oct. 26-28.

Pete Van Nuys, director of the local AYH council, reported that transportation to a lakeside cabin at Big Bear is provided for those who wish the evening of Oct. 26.

Van Nuys said that those who prefer may drive to Big Bear and meet the group there. Participants should bring bikes, a sleeping bag and personal belongings.

Hiking and fishing activities are available, Van Nuys said.

Cost of the trip is $10.50, including food, transportation, insurance and lodging. If a person does not have an AYH pass, he may buy a one-year associated membership for $1, which will entitle him to participate in all local trips and receive a monthly bulletin.

The American Youth Hostels is a nonprofit organization dedicated to offering low cost recreation to the community. Participants "travel under their own steam" by using biking, skiing, hiking, sailing and rafting as part of the American Youth Hostels year-round program.

More information on AYH or the Big Bear trip may be obtained between 2 and 6 p.m. a 621-1615.

"As soon as dummy hit the table I saw the chance for a most unusual play. Give my partner exactly three diamonds and I could duck twice if declarer finessed twice. Then with the third finesse I would take my king and leave dummy's ace high and dry.

"Things started out perfectly. South won the heart lead and finessed a diamond. It worked! He returned to his hand with a club and repeated the successful diamond finesse. I was able to duck with confidence because my partner had played the deuce and then the trey of diamonds. He would have high-looked with an even number.

"Then my balloon exploded. South returned to his hand with a club and cashed two more cards in that suit. My partner discarded the nine of diamonds and there was my king exposed to the world in his unprotected state."

Citrus College devoting week to 'Roaring Twenties'

AZUSA — The music, fashions, dances and frivolities of "The Roaring Twenties" are coming back to Citrus College during the annual Homecoming week beginning Monday.

Events will take place in "Machine Gun Alley," a simulated town made up of game, refreshment and entertainment booths sponsored by campus clubs.

Events include a Frisbee-throwing marathon through Nov. 3, faculty frolics, a Charleston dance contest, barbershop quartet contest and jazz music from 11 a.m. to noon daily during the week.

There will also be a pie-eating contest, a tug of war, penny race, a "Hot Lips" contest and a "Bootleg Still" raid.

Old-time movies will be shown next Monday, Oct. 30 and Oct. 31 at 8 p.m. in the student center. A play, "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds," will be presented Nov. 2 at 8 p.m. in the Little Theater.

Other events include a spaghetti dinner for alumni Thursday from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. in the student center and a football game with Southwestern College Saturday at 7:30 in the stadium.

Surf film Thursday at Ganesha

POMONA — The Pomona Valley Surfers Association, a campus club at Ganesha High School, will show a 75-minute color film entitled "Wave Scene" in the school auditorium Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

The public is invited. Tickets are $1.50 per person.

Tickets may be purchased at the door, according to club president Peter Gonzales, 15, a Ganesha sophomore who recently participated in surfing competition at Malibu Beach.

GANESHA CAREER CENTER

Students Teresa Campbell, 16, and Jarvis Howell, 17, analyze legal secretary career opportunities and I.Q. testing required by colleges for prospective pre-med students. Standing are Dr. Gene G. Brophy, coordinator of secondary education programs in Pomona schools, and Mrs. Ellen C. Lepp, counselor.

Results at career center surprising to educators

By PHYLLIS CANNON
P-B Staff Writer

POMONA — Since Sept. 19, 2,561 student contacts were made at the Ganesha High School Career Center, far outreaching the wildest expectations of educators involved in the new program.

This averages out to more than two inquiries per student.

Some 115 students signed in between 8:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. Thursday — before school and during lunch period.

The students get up-to-the minute information on careers, jobs, trade schools, college requirements, scholarships and opportunities available in the military. In addition, they may enroll in vocational classes being offered by the Baldy View Regional Occupational Program (ROP).

Until this fall, career-related resources in Pomona schools were scattered, fragmented and uncoordinated.

In September the Pomona Unified School District, in cooperation with ROP, opened career centers at the three high schools in the community. All career related resources were concentrated in the centers and certificated counselors and ROP paraprofessionals were added to assist curious students six hours each day.

The centers are open before and after school, during lunch and during class periods. However, students must utilize their own time, not class time, to do their investigating.

High student participation is reported at both Garey and Pomona high schools, but not quite as startling as statistics reported at Ganesha, according to Sidney G. Moses, assistant superintendent of educational services.

As explained by Dr. Gene G. Brophy, coordinator of secondary education programs, each center has an inventory of resource material related to educational requirements and occupational competencies needed in many different career choices.

"This material is related to the needs both of students seeking advanced education and students who plan to go directly to work upon graduation," Brophy continued.

Ann Addison is the ROP career specialist at Ganesha. She reports 41 Ganesha students currently are enrolled in ROP courses. Mrs. Ellen C. Lepp is center counselor.

At Garey, Marjorie M. Quane, dean of instruction, is center counselor and Judy Barber is ROP career specialist. At Pomona career education teacher Gordon A. Taylor and Anita Robertson fill those roles.

"The career centers developed from a real need to help make the educational program more relevant for studies," said Brophy. "Many other districts had developed such centers successfully and ideas were borrowed and adapted."

Brophy credited Jack Wooton, Mrs. Lepp and Taylor "for developing sites and programs."

Ganesha's center is being added to by woodshop instructor Mike Scherard and his students. They are erecting office partitions and book shelves and designing a media center to house tape players and projectors.

Career center educators are planning to present speakers from various career fields and take students on field trips to observe career people at work.

Parent participation is invited. Frequently, educators acknowledge, parents assist sons and daughters in making career choices.

All students who enroll in ROP classes do so at the career centers. ROP this fall is offering 25 courses in 14 fields, preparing high school students for the job market.

These courses also offer credit towards high school graduation.

One big problem students face when enrolling in ROP courses is transportation. Classes may be taught in another community, and students must provide their own transportation. Many are kept out because of this, educators report.

3 get 'distinguished' awards at Cal Poly

POMONA — Three Cal Poly faculty members have won annual distinguished teacher awards for the 1972-73 academic year.

The award winners are Thomas H. Athey, associate professor of data processing; Dr. Joan M. Greenway, associate professor of social sciences; and Nancy P. Hall, former lecturer in biological sciences.

Athey joined the faculty in 1970 after experience as a systems analyst with U.S. Marine Corps in Washington, D.C. He has a bachelor's degree in physics from Utah State University and a master's in operations research from the U.S. Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey.

Greenway joined the faculty in 1971 after extensive radio and television work in her native Australia. She holds bachelor's degrees in French, English and anthropology from the University of Colorado, plus a master's and a Ph.D. in anthropology from the same university.

Hall, a Cal Poly alumna, had been a faculty member for the last 4½ years before taking a teaching post at Pomona Elementary School in the Ontario-Montclair School District. She holds a master's degree from the University of Oregon and recently earned her lifetime elementary credential at Cal Poly.

Eye surgery topic for diabetes unit

Increase in flu cases prompts search for blood

POMONA — With the increase of flu cases and the approaching rainy season, the Pomona Blood Donor Center of the American Red Cross is seeking additional donors to meet its weekly quota.

Persons in good health between the ages of 18 and 65 are urged to make appointments and donate a pint of blood. Those donating to a group account, such as a business, church or club, also maintain an individual credit in the blood bank.

The Pomona Donor Center at 480 N. Reservoir St. is open every Tuesday from 3 to 6:30 p.m. and Wednesday from 1:30 to 5 p.m.

Appointments are urged and may be made by calling 629-7435.

Student telephones teacher—he's okay

POMONA — Former Garey High School student David Scharfi is alive and well in the Israeli army.

Scharfi telephoned his former teacher, Mrs. Ginger Friedman, from Tel Aviv Monday to report that he has gone through the 17-day war without injuries.

A native of Israel, the 20-year-old youth returned to his homeland two years ago, after spending two years in Pomona where he attended Garey High.

Halloween carnival slated at Kingsley

POMONA — The Kingsley Elementary School PTA will host its annual Halloween carnival Friday. The festivities will begin at 4:30 p.m. with a costume parade for all school age children and pre-schoolers.

Carnival activities will continue until 9 p.m. The carnival will feature a cake walk, country store, spook house and food booths sponsored by the PTA. Youth organizations will sponsor the game booths.

A free magic show will be presented in the cafeteria by the Burger King.

Women to attend waste meeting

COVINA — Members of Diamond Bar and Rowland Heights junior women's clubs will participate in the fall meeting of the California Committee for Resource Recovery Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Covina Woman's Club, 128 S. San Jose St.

Representatives of 25 statewide environmental and community-based groups are members of the coalition, formed to encourage municipal governments to utilize resource recovery concepts for solid waste.

Chairmen of committees named for Jaycees parade

POMONA — Sam Russo, a Pomona businessman, will serve as chairman of the Jaycees' 21st annual Christmas parade Dec. 8.

The parade is scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. and proceed east along Holt Avenue from Huntington Boulevard to Palomares Street.

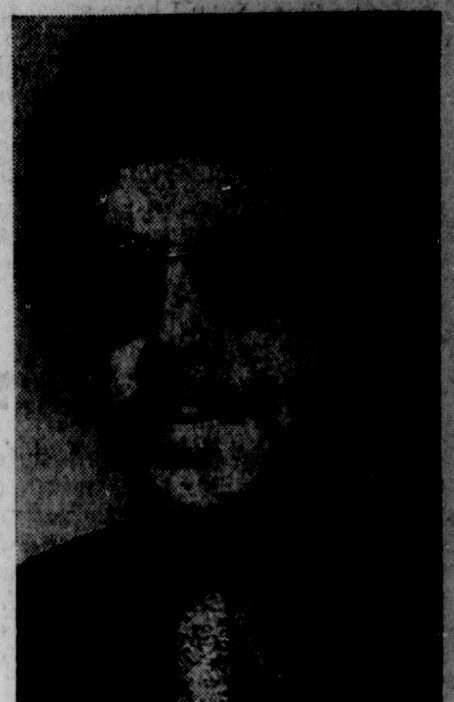

The theme of this year's parade is "The Magic of Christmas."

Others named to serve with Russo in planning and conducting the event are Mike Arrambide, adviser; Mike Dykes, director; Ken Kliewer, second vice president; Vickie Chambers, pre-parade reception and post parade banquet.

Don Pitts, publicity; Bob Mueller, formation; Wayne Smith, dispersal; Steve Holmes, bands; Gil Smith, floats; Dick Woody, special units; Tom Dreyer, equestrian units; Bill Freeland, cars and communications; Bob Bosche and Shel Wellins, celebrities; and Stan Kawa, the Jaycee float.

Committeemen, Russo said, are working to make this year's parade one of the best ever, with marching bands, colorful floats, equestrians, clowns and Santa, "all ingredients of a magic Christmas."

Historians will see film about Mexico

POMONA — Mexican history, culture and traditions will set the theme Thursday at the fall quarterly meeting of the Historical Society of Pomona Valley.

Juan Matute, regional manager for Mexicana Airlines, will make a presentation which will include the showing of a full-color film documentary that depicts the history of Mexico through the ancient Toltec, Aztec and Mayan civilizations.

The meeting, at the Pilgrim Congregational Church, will start at 7:30 p.m. it is a general membership meeting, open to the public, and all interested persons are invited to attend. There will be no admission charge.

The film, loaned by Mexicana, is narrated by Orson Welles.

Following the showing, Matute will talk about the Padua Hills Players and the players' part in keeping alive the traditions of early California and Mexico in the Pomona Valley.

He is especially knowledgeable on this subject, having been associated with Padua from its beginning.

While attending Pomona College, of which he is a graduate, Matute worked and performed there. Retaining his interest, he is now on the Padua Institute Board and serves as its vice chairman.

The program will also include fellowship, refreshments and entertainment, provided by a trio of young musicians from Diamond Bar called the Uniques.

Clem Neibel, society president, said he hoped the program would appeal to persons of all ages and invited the public to attend, with or without members accompanying them.

FROM THE CAPITOL

Pomona school board member, Roy Day, right, presents an American flag that flew over the Capitol in Washington, D.C., to Jim Kistler, president of the Roosevelt Elementary School student council. Looking on during the special Veterans Day program are Jacqueline Burton and Edward Dillon of the student council. The flag was sent to the school by Congressman Jerry Pettis.

Flag that flew in Washington now flying here

POMONA — An American flag that flew over the nation's Capitol now flies over Roosevelt Elementary School thanks to Congressman Jerry L. Pettis and Pomona school board member Roy Day.

The flag, which flew above the Capitol on Oct. 6 was presented to the students of the school last Friday by Day. Pettis obtained the flag for the school at Day's request. It replaces a flag that was stolen.

Day presented the flag to Jim Kistler, president of the school's student council, during a special Veterans Day assembly.

Attorney to speak on Proposition 1

POMONA — Attorney Paul Livadary will speak on Proposition 1, Gov. Reagan's tax limitation initiative, Friday at the regular meeting of the General Dynamics Management Club.

Livadary is a member of the Californians for Lower Taxes speakers bureau.

The meeting will be held at the Diamond Bar Country Club, beginning at 8 p.m.

EDITORIAL

Opinion

Are there lessons in Agnew case?

The tragedy of Spiro Agnew is that he did not see what he was doing as morally wrong.

Illegal, yes, else he would not have kept secret from the Internal Revenue Service that he was receiving money as gifts for his personal use.

But Agnew seems to have believed he was not betraying the public trust because, as he put it "no contracts were awarded to contractors who were not competent to perform the work and in most instances state contracts were awarded without arrangement for the payment of money to the contractor."

He denies the payments in any way influenced his official actions.

In saying that "my acceptance of contributions was part of a long-established pattern of political fund raising in the state" he does not seem even now to understand that by his acts he was weakening the democratic institutions in which he believes.

In fact, in view of this "long-established pattern" as he sees it, Agnew seems to regard the actions taken against him as unfair.

This, I submit, is a great tragedy. Friends who have worked with no axes to grind for President Nixon, Agnew or the Republican party tell me they found Agnew an intelligent and perceptive man of great promise, who grew in stature with his job. He was not, in private, the controversial lightning rod he sometimes appeared in public. And he came of a moral background.

So what went wrong with this man of great promise (and a reported IQ of 135) ends up going down this dark and lonely path?

This is something we must learn more about. For Agnew is not alone. What he has done goes on in most states and among numbers of men in high national office.

It is not enough to say that Agnew and others accept money because "everybody does." This is a cop out. For if "everybody" does it, this is the greater reason for concerted action to change our political malpractices. For this is the kind of crime which can, if it spreads far enough, destroy the democracy we believe in.

I had a friend once who took this same shady road. The temptations of office were too great for him to handle. It was not that he was a mean man, or stupid. He had, in fact, a brilliant mind. He came of a family with high standards and with an honorable, even famous, name. He was not rich, but he did not want for money. He had strong and good friends in number willing to help him through crises and to aid him in fighting temptation. He had a wonderful, beautiful, loyal, honest wife.

But he lost all this — wife, friends, law practice, political career. He turned away from his wife and friends — and would not listen. We called him weak, but that was no explanation.

Since those days I have spent many hours through the years wondering what made this man do what he did. Why does one man resist temptation and another not? How do we distinguish one type of man from another before we vote one into office? What do we do to encourage officials to remain honest? When office holders do go wrong how do we discover it in time to prevent great damage to our communities, to the men themselves and to their families?

Hope for tomorrow

The citizens of the United States, have been served a steady diet of heartache, disgust, shame and alarm for nearly a year. Corruption in government is the general theme, and the Nixon administration, the source of much of this sorrow.

With the resignation of Spiro T. Agnew, nearly two dozen public servants have now exited from the nation's capitol. It is a sad, sick day, but there are bright points worth noting.

First, the system of checks and balances built within our Constitution has served us well. In this instance, the judicial branch of the government has corrected the flaws and failures of the executive. Shortly, the legislative will surely find its brains and moral fibre to demonstrate leadership within the land. The Nixon administration is over, or at least so fatally damaged that the Congress must pick up the reins of national leadership.

Next to the soundness of our system of government is the stunning performance by several leading newspapers. The highest officials of this republic sought to pummel, intimidate, coerce and, if possible, silence the rightful exercise of investigative reporting. Radio and television news was shoved around and a defensive posture hit too many commentators. Now, how well we see the absolute necessity for a free and honest press. Have you visited Chile lately? This is a great moment for the men and women of the Fourth Estate.

Historically, the freedom of speech and freedom of the press have been the muscle that yanked political forces into line when they strayed beyond the mark. In the episode of the last year, not much has been heard from the pulpit or the university in regard to correcting the abuses of power that flourished. Ditto for the trade unions. Yet, there was little for these groups to do, for little did they know.

The shining hour belongs to those unknown, unnamed people in government who simply would not abide the falsehoods, nor bury the wrong, nor be intimidated by rank or threat.

"My big brother can lick your big brother!"

JACK ANDERSON

Grandmother stands up to Gulf Oil

WASHINGTON — In a world beset by war and Watergate, a determined grandmother has stood up to a powerful oil executive over Gulf Oil's practices in faraway Angola. The story, as it has unfolded in their private correspondence, is an American morality tale worth printing.

The grandmother, Elizabeth Jackman of Arcadia, Calif., a Gulf stockholder, read a newspaper story criticizing her company for supporting the Portuguese colonials against the oppressed blacks in Angola. She protested.

The executive, B. R. Dorsey, president of the multimillion-dollar corporation, heeded the voice from the crowd and tried to assuage her. She wound up going to Angola, a lone stockholder on a fact-finding mission, where Gulf promised she would see for herself the company's benevolence toward the blacks.

Her private crusade began in April 1972, when she set aside her family duties long enough to fly to the Gulf stockholders' meeting in Pittsburgh. She had a question. BRUSH-OFF

"Could not Gulf," she politely, "be more responsive than it is to the needs of the Africans?" But the Gulf brass gave her the brush-off.

Bothered by this, she wrote an acidly civilized letter to the corporate boss himself. The stockholders meeting, she complained, had been a "dismal, joyless affair, lacking in taste, sensitivity and humor. I had believed that (it) would be an occasion for the exchange of ideas. I now recognize the extent of my naivete."

The Gulf executives, she wrote, were "sitting there like robots . . . clapping together (at) the same beat. I heard a beat from a different drummer. Why didn't Gulf . . . explore a more creative position in Angola (it) brought out the Bella Abzug in me."

The earnestness of her appeal stirred the busy Gulf president. "I must begin by apologizing for (the meeting's) rigidity," Dorsey responded. "I am sorry it seemed 'dismal and lacking in taste.' We must improve the way we conduct future meetings . . . I am . . . abashed."

As for her complaints about Angola, he invited her to see the Gulf operation there for herself at company expense. Mrs. Jackman accepted the invitation but insisted upon paying her own fare.

The obliging Dorsey personally ordered detailed briefing papers be sent to her. These showed that Gulf has a formidable $209 million investment in Angola. Black employment at the oil facilities, according to the company statistics, was up 10 per cent in one year, with pensions and other programs above the Angolan average.

Loaded down with corporate materials, the determined grandmother flew off to "see for herself" the Gulf facilities in both Angola and Nigeria. She received the well wishes of Dorsey from his executive suite.

"This letter probably will arrive too late to have permitted me to wish you a safe and worthwhile trip to Africa," he wrote, "but not too late to be welcoming you back and to ask you to share with me your reactions to your trip."

Upon her return, accordingly, Mrs. Jackman shared her reactions with Mr. Dorsey. Gulf's "Angolan efforts seem ludicrous and feeble," she wrote.

She had been impressed with Gulf's efforts to assist the black government in Nigeria with the "transition from colonialism to self-determination." But she had found this approach "totally lacking" in Angola. "The one black" in the Angola Gulf management, she wrote, had been shipped out of town "apparently because of friction with the Portuguese staff."

She had been briefed by Gulf on how kind the Portuguese were to Angolan blacks. Instead, she had found laborers on a coffee plantation kept behind barbed wire "in one-room dormitories . . . separated from their families, cooking the allotted food on open fires."

The few whites in Angola, in contrast, lived in a world of golf courses, swimming pools and luxurious homes with well-stocked liquor cabinets.

"Importing large American cars for the Gulf staff," she wrote Dorsey, "seems quite unnecessary." The practice "fosters the idea of limitless American money . . . The big cars are locally dubbed 'swimming pools.'"

Some of Gulf's employees in Angola, she charged, regarded blacks with "the outmoded southern USA . . . redneck attitude."

She called upon Gulf to support small black businesses, to seek increased black enrollment in farm and technical schools and to promote better understanding of black liberation efforts in Angola.

"The priority given to construction of clubs for the Gulf staff, mainly Europeans, puts an emphasis on importing a lifestyle completely inappropriate to black Angola today," she wrote.

The disappointed Dorsey, however, didn't reply. Instead an aide, William Cox, who accompanied Mrs. Jackman on her African tour, wrote back that "we both saw the same things but interpreted them quite differently."

Saddened, the crusading grandmother sold her Gulf stock and joined a church-sponsored boycott of Gulf products.

Footnote: The dissident stockholder, nevertheless, had an impact on Gulf policies. Company officials have now recommended ending the use of large American cars in Angola, promoting greater black enrollment in technical schools and making more purchases from small black businesses.

Fuel crisis as a challenge to U.S.

There may be one useful consequence of the war in the Middle East — the attention it has focused on the possibility of an Arab "oil squeeze," and focused on the possibility of an Arab "oil squeeze," and beyond that, on the whole question of energy in an industrialized world.

Surely it is better that both problems be anticipated now, when they are only rumblings on the horizon, rather than be stumbled into a few years hence when they would indeed constitute a crisis.

Any squeeze play against the United States is not considered likely at this time. Even should it be tried, the country could — with not too onerous rationing — ride it out.

Not so in the future, however, if current figures for consumption, for domestic production and for importation of Mideast oil are extrapolated toward the end of the decade.

Thus the United States must take steps now to ensure that it can never be made the victim either of petroleum blackmail or of a dislocation of the world's monetary system by virtue of the immense dollar reserves the oil-exporting countries are accumulating. It must take steps not only for its own security but in the interest of whatever small hopes for peace in the Middle East have not been smashed by this latest war.

The United States will never again be self-sufficient in oil — not as we have become accustomed to using it. Already, John A. Love, White House energy chief, suggests that gasoline rationing may be next in line after government controls on home heating oil, propane and similar fuels. And it has nothing to do with any real or potential Arab oil squeeze.

"I do not see how we can have any increase in domestic fuel supplies for three to five years," he says. "But demand is going to be made to fit supply one way or another."

INSIDE REPORT

Liberal Democrats have bold plans

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — Behind the delayed approval of Rep. Gerald Ford as Vice President is a fantastic but deadly serious effort by fire-eating liberal Democratic Congressmen to block him indefinitely, impeach President Nixon and hand the presidency to Democratic Speaker Carl Albert.

That maximum goal is not likely to be achieved. Although they have pushed the House Democrats caucus well leftward, these highly ideological, highly partisan liberals still constitute a distinct minority. Nevertheless, they may well achieve their minimum goal of delaying Ford's approval until the question of Mr. Nixon's surrender of the surreptitious White House tape recordings is resolved.

Thus, final action on Ford could be stalled until the next congressional session in January. Neither Speaker Albert nor most House Democrats want this. But the Speaker has proved consistently unwilling to oppose the left-wing fireeaters in his party's caucus. What makes this personally embarrassing for Albert is his status as a heartbeat from the presidency so long as Ford's approval is delayed.

Immediately following Mr. Nixon's selection of Ford Oct. 12, the House seemed sure to approve their old colleague quickly. Any trouble seemed more likely to come from the Senate, where desultory talk of delay on Ford emerged from the Oct. 13 Democratic caucus — hardly enough to concern the White House.

However, Albert and other House Democratic leaders were peeved by forecasts that the House would rubberstamp old crony Gerry Ford in contrast to a thorough Senate investigation. Hence, at the closed-door caucus of House Democrats Wednesday, Oct. 17, the Speaker pledged exhaustive consideration of Ford. He was echoed by Rep. Peter Rodino of New Jersey, whose House Judiciary Committee will hold hearings.

Only Rep. Robert Sikes, a conservative Democrat from Florida urging quick approval, broke the facade of unanimous support for the Albert-Rodino procedure at Wednesday's caucus. But beneath the facade was a split of potentially historic significance, not fully perceived by most Congressmen and totally missed by the White House.

In pledging careful investigation, Albert and Rodino meant full scrutiny of Ford's moral, ethical and financial background before consenting to the President's selection. In saying the same words, militantly liberal Congressmen meant something quite different: full congressional parity with Mr. Nixon in filling the vice presidential vacancy under the 25th Amendment.

The latter viewpoint was put forth at the caucus by Rep. John Moss of California, a senior Congressman often aligned with the fireeaters. He argued that Ford's qualifications must be judged. Another veteran liberal, Rep. John Dingell of Michigan, indicated he might oppose Ford on ideological grounds.

Rep. Donald Fraser of Minnesota summarized this viewpoint by asking Dingell: Was there anything in the 25th Amendment requiring a Congressman to approve someone he does not want to become President? Of course not, Dingell replied. Indeed, Fraser regards Ford's conservative civil rights record as more relevant than the current FBI investigation of his personal life.

In the cloakroom, this position is illuminated by Rep. Robert Drinan of Massachusetts, the priest turned fire-eating politician. Suppose, he says, George McGovern had been elected President and Sargent Shriver later resigned as Vice President? If McGovern named Angela Davis as Vice President, would Congress not reject her on ideological grounds?

Such logic is rejected by most Democratic Congressmen, perhaps two-thirds of Wednesday's caucus, who believe Drinan and friends are improperly trying to repeal last year's presidential election. But the House Judiciary Committee has become a redoubt for the fireeaters with fully 10 of its 21 Democrats (including the ineffable Father Drinan) considering themselves "young Turks." By demanding Ford's views on all Nixon stands (including the secret tapes), they intend to prevent final action this year.

By year's end, they expect, Mr. Nixon may well have defied a Supreme Court order to surrender the tape recordings and be the object of impeachment proceedings. In that case, Ford's nomination would be frozen.

The permissive Albert ordinarily might not prod the Judiciary Committee, but on this issue he is extremely sensitive to accusations of stalling Ford's approval so he can remain Mr. Nixon's constitutional successor. That ultimately may be what undoes the audacious scheme in the House to seize the presidency.

Mojave Desert, lava bed substitute as classroom

SCALING A LAVA FLOW

In the bright desert afternoon sun, three girls from a group of 120 Suzanne Intermediate School eighth-graders scramble over the fissured crest of a lava bed. They were on the way back to buses for the return to the Walnut school after a day-long field trip last week to Pisgah Crater in the heart of the Mojave desert. The group began its trip with a tour of the Yermo diggings at the site of an ancient village of Indians, one of the oldest on the North American continent.

Walnut students get experience on desert trip

WALNUT — What does the Mojave Desert have in common with a classroom?

Both are learning environments, 120 eighth-graders at Suzanne Intermediate School discovered during a field trip to the desert last week. The youngsters went to visit a site where some of the oldest human artifacts on the continent are being unearthed, and later clambered over a lava bed and cinder cone of an extinct volcano.

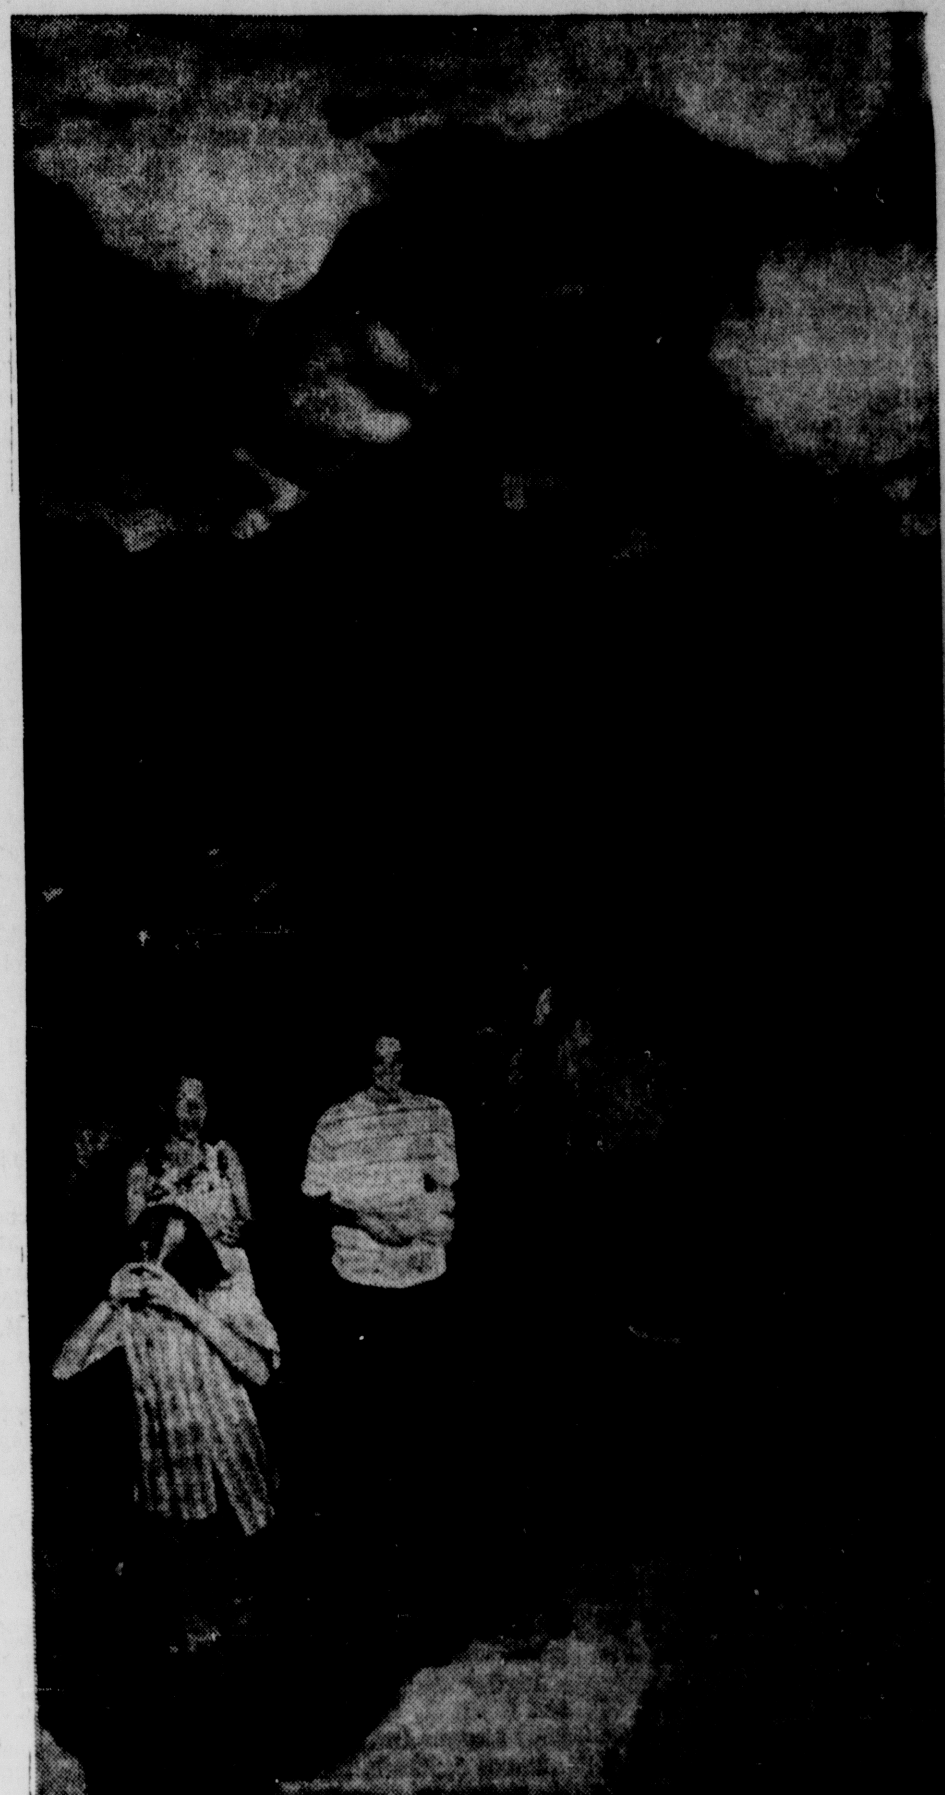

After week-long studies directed by their "track corps" team of four teachers, the students toured diggings in Yermo, a community outside Barstow. There they saw relics of cookware, personal items and dwellings of a tribe which lived around the edge of Lake Mannix in prehistoric times. The lake itself is now marked only by relics—a clay pan under the desert floor, fossils, and smooth gray stones following the rim of the dry lake's bed.

Following a morning spent in the diggings, which were opened by the late Dr. Lewis Leakey of Chapman College, the kids clambered into buses for a long ride to Pisgah Crater. The crater, owned by a railroad company, is about 20 miles into the desert from Yermo.

At Pisgah Crater the crowd poked around lava beds, steam vents, and other features of volcanic action. Most seemed to be interested mainly in finding a dusty cavern where they could roll in the dirt. "How can you prove you were here if you're not dirty?" remarked one girl.

Although some of the kids were unimpressed with the diggings—"it's kind of dull, really"—all seemed to enjoy rock-hopping on the lava beds.

All four teachers, four parents, and a grandparent accompanied the kids. The trip was part of the school's environmental education program.

CRATER CAVE

One of the delights in a visit to an extinct volcano is discovering the secrets in the crater's lava bed. Here a group of students from Suzanne Intermediate School in Walnut roam the cool recesses of a steam vent—a pocket formed by hot gases inside the molten rock when Pisgah Crater in the Mojave Desert erupted eons ago.

Dedicated student

He came 7,000 miles to class

LA PUENTE — For Henry James Aboagye, attending school took more effort than boarding a bus or driving down a freeway.

When the 22-year-old man chose Valley Vocational Center as the place to continue his post-high school education, he had a slight transportation problem.

Body and fender class latest on center program

HACIENDA HEIGHTS — Last week saw the unveiling of a new facility for Valley Vocational Center, located at 15580 Gale Ave., next to the proposed Shakey's Pizza site in Hacienda Heights.

Due to an overcrowding situation, VVC had to acquire new buildings in order to offer new career programs.

According to Don Roth, VVC administrator, "This location will house our new body and fender class, the latest full-time, year-long vocational course that we are offering."

School bus service will be maintained between the new site and VVC in order for students to avail themselves of all services and facilities found at the adult center.

Henry's home is in Ghana and he had to cross 7,000 miles — one ocean, and three continents, to register for classes at VVC.

Perhaps even more amazing is the fact that Henry is deaf.

While attending the Mampong-Okwawim School for the Deaf in Ghana, he read about the hearing-impaired program at VVC in a trade journal.

Henry, who reads, writes and understands English, uses sign language to communicate with other deaf persons and school interpreters.

Through Jack Swain, one of the interpreters, Henry described how he came to America.

"After reading about the school, I sent them a letter asking for a brochure and a description of other facilities that might help deaf students like myself learn a trade," he commented.

The letter was received by Mike Abramson, VVC counselor, in October of 1972 and was the first of numerous correspondences between the two.

"I had sent Henry a student visa form and all the information that I thought necessary," said Abramson.

"But to tell you the truth, I thought there wasn't much chance of Henry ever coming to America, let alone VVC."

Abramson wasn't the only one surprised when the school received a letter from Henry last August saying that he was on his way and would someone meet him in either New York City or Los Angeles.

After working as an apprentice machinist in Ghana for the past few years, Henry was able to save up enough money for the trip over.

According to Henry, his father, a government security officer, and the rest of his family which includes his mother, five brothers, and three sisters, were behind his move but couldn't afford to help him financially.

Undaunted, Henry arrived in Los Angeles, via New York, London, and Accra, the capital of Ghana, on Aug. 31.

"Our first concern," said Jack Swain, "was to find Henry a place to stay. We arranged for him to live in the home of Mrs. Rose Ridley in Hacienda Heights and that has worked out fine."

After touring VVC, Henry registered for the air conditioning and refrigeration technician class. "I think that this is a field that can only grow," he explained, "and besides, I like to keep cool."

Henry also takes some academic classes in the hearing impaired instructional lab of VVC to help him with his technical studies.

And what does he do for entertainment here? He told Swain he enjoys watching TV, especially "Mod Squad" and football games, and playing soccer, at which he is quite proficient.

Back in Ghana, Henry eats such exotic foods as fufu (a type of bread) and cassava (maize) but here he enjoys such American delights as hamburgers and shakes.

"Life seems much easier here," says Henry. He hopes to settle down in America and get married.

If Henry hasn't found out about inflation yet, he will learn quickly.

"I think he really took a liking to us," noted Abramson, "because for the short time Henry has been going to school at VVC, we have received inquiries from 141 more deaf Ghanaian students asking how to obtain student visas and come to school."

With the amount of effort that Henry put forth in coming to the area, officials at VVC feel confident he can successfully complete his studies. They are also taking steps to prepare for more deaf students from Ghana.

Walnut schedules missionary rally

WALNUT — The Rev. Wayne Fagerstrom will lead a charismatic missionary rally Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Christian Chapel of Walnut Valley.

The evangelist lives in Covina where he founded the Community Christian Center, an interdenominational charismatic organization, in 1969.

Walnut will review diversion program

WALNUT — Following up "administrative action," the City Council Wednesday night will review a resolution approving city participation in a juvenile diversion program.

In its regular session at 8 p.m. at city hall, the council faces an agenda which includes a minimum wage rate for workmen and mechanics employed on public works contracts, a resolution honoring former Collegewood area postman Jerry Kubik for "his years of service to the City of Walnut," and second reading of an ordinance setting speed limits on Lemon Avenue.

City Manager Andy C. Lazzaretto said the council was unable to act before an Oct. 10 deadline for participation in the juvenile diversion program, so he gave administrative approval for the city's inclusion in an application for state aid to fund the program. "This is something they (councilmen) have reacted favorably to in the past," noted Lazzaretto.

Sponsored by the California Council on Criminal Justice (CCCJ), the diversion program seeks to find alternatives to the courts-penal system route for youngsters either in trouble with the law or obviously approaching delinquency.

It is a regional program designed to use community groups, public and private agencies to help youngsters, rather than feed them into the courts-penal system. Funding is principally provided by the CCCJ and other state sources, with participating local agencies contributing "in-kind services" and some hard cash.

According to the terms of the program, records must show an annual 10 per cent drop in juvenile offenders brought before courts if the diversion program is to be maintained.

A resolution declaring municipal support for three years, and beyond, is required before CCCJ regards as serious an application for a part in the program.

Two instructors offer program about skiing

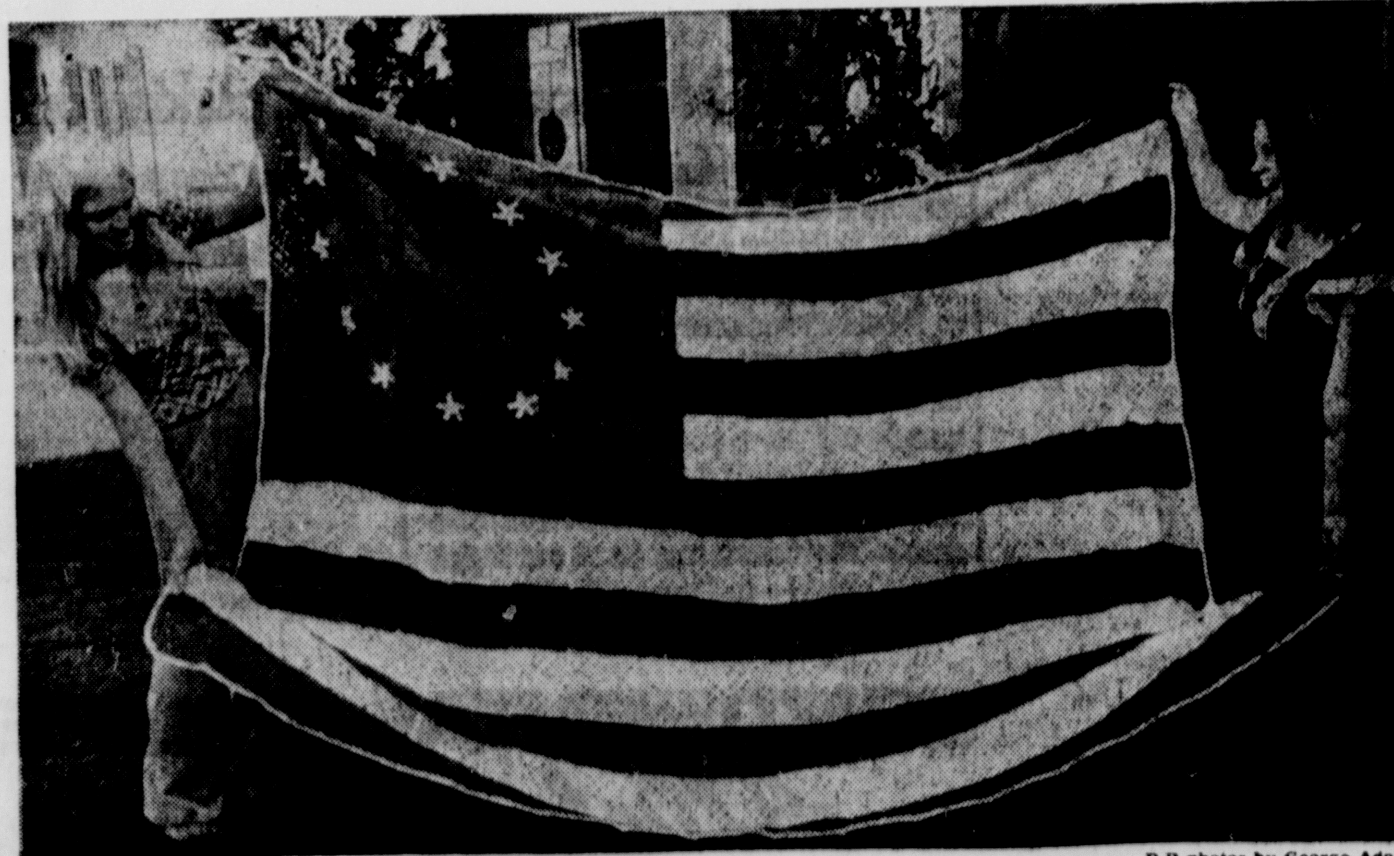

POMONA — Professional ski instructors Don Radford and Dick Morris will present an introductory program on skiing Wednesday in the public library's public conference room, starting at 7 p.m.

The program, aimed primarily at beginners, will cover skiing equipment, ski bindings, clothing, warm-ups, safety rules and physical fitness.

Films about skiing will be shown and there will be a display of equipment provided by Buffums' and a collection of new books on skiing which may be borrowed by library patrons.

The library program will be followed by a dry land skiing course to be offered by the Pomona Parks and Recreation Department starting Monday at the Ganesha Park Recreation Center.

Instruction on Alpine techniques will run for four consecutive Monday evenings, followed by a ski fashion show, two weeks on Nordic skiing and four weeks on Alpine techniques. There is a $3 fee per person for the entire course. Further information may be obtained by calling 620-2321.

FLAG AFGHAN---222 SQUARES

Lisa Ekman, left, and her friend, Charlotte Nordstrom display the Betsy Ross flag they made as a joint project. The two eighth graders from Rincon Intermediate School gave the flag away.

Rowland flag-wavers crochet fancy model

ROWLAND HEIGHTS — Lisa Ekman, an eighth-grader at Rincon Intermediate School, and her best friend, Charlotte Nordstrom, crocheted 222 squares to make a 95-by 74-inch flag afghan.

When it was all put together, the girls gave their creation to Lisa's brother John on his 16th birthday.

The afghan is a replica of the Betsy Ross flag. It took the girls six months to complete it. When it was finished they wrapped it in a large box and presented it to John in September.

It was begun in a Rincon home-making in art class last spring. The girls spent $75 on yarn. They received technical assistance from Mrs. Nordstrom and Rincon home-making teacher Brenda Alexander.

Before the girls put crochet hooks to yarn, they drew the flag on graph paper.

It contains 13 alternating red and white stripes, a field of blue and the 13 original stars.

"No one believed we'd get it done," said Lisa, who added she wanted to "do something weird" for her brother who "beats me up all time" just because "I tease him a little."

Parents at Nogales will meet teachers

LA PUENTE — Parents night will be held at Nogales High School at 7 p.m. on Nov. 15.

Activities will begin in the gymnasium with principal David Berteaux introducing department chairmen, counselors and administrators.

Parents then will be invited to visit classrooms and confer with teachers until 8:45 p.m.

The Boosters will serve refreshments in the Manor from 8:45 to 9:15 p.m.

Which type mattress is better for a dog?

By Dr. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Flounce, our dear dog, has outgrown her baby bed. Now we can't agree on whether her new mattress should be soft, medium or firm. Which is really better for her? Some think it doesn't really make any difference, but I am not so sure about that. So I want your advice. —N.C.

Dear N.C.: Somehow, from your letter I have the idea Flounce just might be a lap dog. If so, a softer mattress might satisfy her the most. (You would want it adequately covered, obviously, to keep her from nibbling and for sanitary reasons.) Generally, the larger the dog the more firm the mattress. Surprising to some, perhaps, is the fact that the larger the dog the greater the need for a mattress. It is the large breeds which suffer from "housemaid's elbow," sore knees which can develop eventually into disfiguring, painful, infected, low-grade tumors. Training these large breeds to lie on padding at a reasonably young age will prevent the occurrence of this uncomfortable, disfiguring, and occasionally crippling ailment.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My son reports this man not too far from us plants wild rice, wild celery and other plants like that in a pond to lure ducks in there so he can blast them with his shotgun. Isn't this illegal?

Those poor birds come in there thinking they are getting dinner and all they get is dead instead. Certainly isn't fair. —A.I.

Dear A.I.: Undoubtedly states do vary in the regulations as far as feeding game birds in concerned. I believe, though it is legal to attract wild game birds by planting legal natural foods, the theory being there isn't always going to be a shotgun waiting and some birds will benefit from the additional food supply. (Obviously, any hunting done in that area would have to conform to the state game code.)

State employees vote on proposal to fund 'suitable' candidate

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A major state employee convention will vote this weekend on a proposal to pour an unprecedented $500,000 into the campaign of a "suitable" 1974 candidate for governor.

If approved, the plan would make California State Employees Association (CSEA) potentially the biggest single bankroller of a gubernatorial nominee in California.

Offered by a San Diego chapter of the increasingly militant 102,000-member organization, the resolution will be voted on by delegates to the CSEA's general council at the Los Angeles Convention Center.

The "Suitable" gubernatorial candidate would be chosen by the association's 27-member board of directors after the June primary election.

A spokesman said there was "no way to predict" the prospects for approval of the plan. He noted it could be amended substantially at the convention.

The plan would allocate to the candidate "at least" $500,000.

The spokesman said the fund is expected to contain roughly $1 million by the primary.

Such a huge sum would go a long way toward financing campaign costs. In 1970, Gov.

Ronald Reagan's re-election cost $3.5 million while Democratic nominee Jess Unruh's costs totaled $1.3 million.

It would be the first time that the CSEA as an organization had endorsed a gubernatorial candidate — who might become the workers' boss — and decided to help finance his general election campaign.

The sum would far surpass political contributions made in 1970 to various political campaigns by such prominent wealthy donors as Los Angeles oil man Henry Salvatori, razor blade magnate P. J. Frawley Jr., computer manufacturer Max Palevsky and tire company president Leonard K. Firestone. Of those contributions, Salvatori made the largest at $89,800.

"Many of the problems facing state employees today are due to a governor not sympathetic with our needs," the proposed resolution declares. It does not mention Gov. Ronald Reagan by name.

On the convention agenda also includes resolutions calling for collective bargaining for state employees.

Other convention agency items certain to be watched closely by gubernatorial contenders include resolutions calling for collective bargaining legislation for state employees and a four-day, 36-hour work week.

More uninspected meats for hotels, restaurants ruled

By BERNARD BRENNER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Without consulting the public or its own new consumer affairs adviser, the Agriculture Department has almost doubled the amount of noninspected meat and poultry that retail stores can cut up for hotels and restaurants.

The order does not permit the sale of meat and poultry without slaughterhouse inspection by federal or state officials. However, it nearly doubles the dollar ceiling on the value of meat and poultry which retail stores may cut up for hotels, restaurants and other "non-household" consumers without making their processing facilities subject to federal or state supervision.

The action does not affect most hotels and restaurants in big cities, because they buy meats from "purveyors" whose processing rooms are under inspection. Officials said the greatest impact would be on small towns and resort areas where retail stores are often the only convenient source of meat for restaurants, and on some small lunch counters in urban areas.

Mrs. Nancy Steorts, appointed last summer as a $24,000 a year adviser to Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz on consumer affairs, was caught by surprise by the action.

A department announcement earlier had said Mrs. Steorts would advise agency heads on "issues and actions which have a bearing on consumers," and would represent consumer interests at top department levels. But in an interview, she said she had not been consulted about the new order nor notified before it was issued.

State holding unclaimed property

'Heard that uncle Bill died, please send me the money'

By DONALD THORNTON
SACRAMENTO (UPI) — If you have any long lost relatives named Goodman, Forster, Diachenko, Horman or Anderson, the state of California may have a small fortune hidden away for you.

Or if you're related to a man named Soo Hoo Tom and want to know what happened to that small package of white powder and the opium pipe he left in a safe deposit box in Vallejo years ago, all you have to do is ask the state.

Under the Uniform Disposition of Unclaimed Property Act, California went into the business of being the executor of unclaimed estates and property, such as abandoned safe deposit boxes, in 1959.

And as of Sept. 30, the Unclaimed Property Division of the state Controller's office had accumulated $7.5 million from 9,225 estates of deceased Californians.

It also has accounted for 310,120 items of abandoned property aggregating $23.4 million.

Estates permanently go to the state if unclaimed after five years and abandoned property is subject to claim indefinitely.

To obtain the estates or other property, all you have to do is prove you're the rightful heir.

The biggest one, $111,365.24, is that of William Goodman, who was found dead in an apartment behind his metal shop in Los Angeles March 8, 1965.

Publicity about the man's estate sparked at least 150 letters from people who thought themselves potential relatives.

"We got one telegram from Texas saying 'heard Uncle Bill died. Please send me the money,'" said Millard Heilborn, assistant unclaimed property officer.

In fact, so many people have tried to claim the estate, a special form letter was created for mail replies, Heilborn added. But so far nobody has been able to prove any relation to Goodman or any right to his estate.

Other big estates include Hector Forster, who died in Los Angeles County, $76,907; Sophia Anderson, Los Angeles County, $68,427; John Hor-man, Orange County, $52,615; and Dionysius Diachenko, San Francisco, $51,410.

Last year the state settled 1,651 claims, Heilborn said, paying out $1.1 million while taking in $5.6 million from other estates.

Unclaimed property includes that from abandoned safe deposit boxes. All such property goes to the state after seven years of the termination of rent payments.

The items of value are auctioned off once a year, but the state maintains meticulous accounting of the amount received for each.

A majority of the items are old coins and jewelry. But others include a fishing tackle box full of lures, four tickets to the 1983 Chicago World's Fair, pornographic photos (which were destroyed), and one black negligee.

Before we build a pipeline, we'll know as much about the Arctic as they do.

Beneath the Arctic's frozen ground huge deposits of natural gas lie waiting to be tapped.

And, since there's growing energy shortage here, you're going to need that gas. Even though it will cost more.

So the Gas Company plans to team up with others and build an Arctic pipeline. But before we do, we need some answers.

Namely, how do we build it without harming the land? Or the people who live off the land? We're finding those answers.

Arctic research facilities — mock pipeline installations — are measuring the effects of pipeline on permafrost. There, thousands of buried sensors hooked to computers are giving us an underground view never seen before. So we'll know exactly what we're getting into.

Above ground, acres of test plots are telling us what kinds of grasses grow fastest in the Arctic climate. So we'll know what to plant after we build.

Field teams are banding fish and waterfowl. Planes are tracking caribou, mapping migratory routes that even the natives who live off the herds don't know about. So we'll know where (and when) not to build.

The Gas Company is spending millions on these and other projects. Because it's our job to keep you supplied with natural gas.

But not at the expense of the Arctic.

We're investing in tomorrow.

Ralston satisfied with tie

DENVER (UPI) — Denver Bronco Coach John Ralston, a slight smile creasing his face, philosophized about his team's 23-23 tie with the Oakland Raiders.

"It's better to be the tier than the tie," the second-year coach said after Monday night's game. "Nobody likes a tie, but you have to take it at this time of the year. It put us in good position."

It put Oakland in a tie with Kansas City for first place in the AFC West at 3-2-1 and Denver a game back at 2-3-1.

Plackicker Jim Turner, who played

LOCAL-NATIONAL Sports

quarterback for Ralston at Utah State 11 years ago, got the tie for the Broncos when he kicked a 35-yarder with three seconds to play.

"I told him, 'heck we used to kick ones like this at Utah State' blindfolded," the cheerful Ralston said.

"I didn't feel any different about it than any of the others," said Turner, who also kicks of 43 and 37 yards in the second half and had a 52-yarder hit the crossbar and a 47-yarder blocked in the first half.

"It's a job that's got to be done," he said. "Every one I hit, even those two in the first half, was right on the money."

Turner's final field goal came just 33 seconds after 46-year-old George Blanda gave Oakland a 23-20 lead with a 49-yard field goal—his third of the game and 302nd of his career and the 18th successful field goal kicked against Denver in 18 tries this year.

Blanda, who along with Raider center Jim Otto tied an NFL record by appearing in his 188th consecutive game, also kicked three-pointers from 35 and 13 yards.

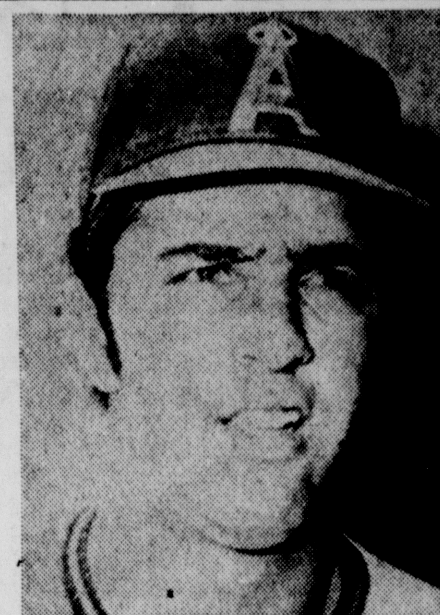

Oakland's other scores came on an 80-yard pass from Ken Stabler to Mike Siani on which Denver defender Randy Montgomery fell at the 50, and on a 16-yard pass from Stabler to Cliff Branch, also covered by Montgomery.

Stabler, who was caught trying to pass six times and had two passes dropped, wound up hitting 16-of-24 for 313 yards and wide receiver Fred Biletnikoff caught eight of those for 116 as he upped his career receiving mark to 6,076.

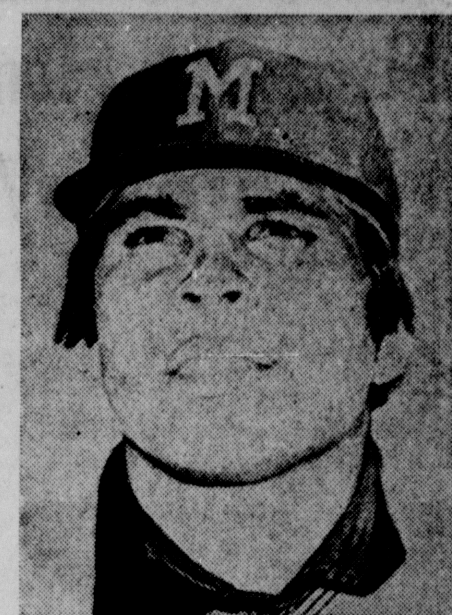

Denver's other scores came on an 80-yard fumble recovery return by safety Bill Thompson on Oakland's first drive, and a one-yard run by Floyd Little.

The main aid to Denver's winning field goal was rookie Ray Guy's kickoff problems after Blanda's final field goal. Guy kicked the ball out of bounds on successive tries and finally wound up kicking from his own 30. Denver got the ball on its 38. Charley Johnson hit Little with a 13-yard pass Joe Dawkins ran 12 and Little nine to set up Turner's tying shot.

"He wasn't trying to do anything special," said Raider Coach John Madden when it was suggested Guy was trying to squib the kick. "I am sure he was nervous. You don't like it but you don't have any excuses."

CLYDE WRIGHT

ELLIE RODRIGUEZ

Halos trade Clyde Wright

ANAHEIM (UPI)—The California Angels, looking for a hitting catcher, traded Clyde Wright, the winningest pitcher in the club's history, to Milwaukee Monday in a 10-player deal that brought Brewer receiver Ellie Rodriguez to the Angels.

"We felt that we needed a catcher very badly and they felt they needed a left-handed starter," Angel manager Bobby Winkles said. "We traded some experience for a little youth."

The multi-player trade, announced by Angels' General Manager Harry Dalton, also involved Brewers outfielders Ollie Brown and Joe Lahoud and pitchers Skip Lockwood and Gary Ryerson, and Angels' pitcher Steve Barber, outfielder Ken Berry, reserve catcher Art Kusnyer and another Angel to be named later.

Wright had won 87 games in his seven-plus years with the Angels but his record this year was 11-19.

"This is not the happiest day of my life," the 30-year-old Wright said. "But there comes a time when it has to be done. I've been fortunate to be with the Angels for the last seven years. This is the prettiest place in the American League to play ball."

Rodriguez, 27, hit .269 in 290 at bats and drove in 30 runs for the Brewers in 1973. He had a .285 average in 1972.

The Angels hope Rodriguez can solve their hitting void as catcher. Their receiver most of last season was Jeff Torborg, 31, who hit .220.

"Everyone on our club involved in the trade was over 30 and everyone we got from Milwaukee was under 30," said Winkles. "So we traded some experience for a little youth."

Angel reliever Barber, 34, who was a 20-game winner with Baltimore in 1963 and 3-2 with California this season, said he was surprised by the trade but was looking forward to playing with Milwaukee, his seventh major league team.

"Initially I was unhappy about it but the more I think about it, I feel Milwaukee has real good potential," Barber said. "They're going to score a lot of runs and all they need is more consistent pitching."

Winkles talked about some of the Angels' acquisitions:

—"Lockwood (5-12 last season) we think can be a good reliever and we have to flirt with the idea that he will be a starter, but we'll have to leave that up to Tom Morgan, our pitching coach."

—"Ollie Brown (who batted .260 and hit seven home runs last season) gives us more power in the outfield than what we had."

—"Lahoud (who batted .204, hit five homers and had 26 RBIs) is a guy that nobody's very high on but I personally like him. I say I like him because he goes about baseball seriously and as far as I'm concerned, that's a start."

—"Ryerson is a guy of 26 who we thought we'd like to take a chance on." (The Angels assigned him to the Salt Lake City club but Dalton said he would join the team's major league spring training camp.)

Other Angels traded included Berry, 32, who hit three home runs and drove in 36 runs while batting .284 in 1972, and Kusnyer, 27, who played only briefly last season, batting .125.

Mark picked as favorite to win IROC

RIVERSIDE — Road racer Mark Donohue is the overwhelming favorite in a poll of national auto racing writers for this weekend's International Race of Champions at Riverside Raceway.

Donohue, one of three drivers representing American road racing in the 12-man field, received 31 first place votes out of 63 ballots cast.

Road racers dominated the poll by taking the top six spots while the oval drivers were ranked in the bottom six.

The poll was taken prior to Jackie Stewart's retirement two weeks ago, however. The three-time world champion was runnerup in the poll with 15 first place votes.

Stewart was followed by Americans Peter Revson and George Follmer and former world champions Emerson Fittipaldi and Denis Hulme.

Since Stewart's announcement, he has been replaced by A. J. Foyt who has an outstanding road racing record as well as oval. Foyt co-drove with Dan Gurney to victory in the 1967 Le Mans endurance race and won a 500 mile stock car race at Riverside in 1970.

Stock car driver Bobby Allison was the highest placed oval driver in the writers' poll with one first place vote and seventh position. Behind him came Bobby Unser, Richard Petty, David Pearson, Gordon Johncock and Roger McCluskey.

Three of the four races comprising the $140,000 Race of Champions will be held at Riverside in conjunction with the Times Grand Prix Can-Am event this weekend. Two of the 30-lap sprint races will be held on Saturday and one on Sunday.

The 12 drivers will be competing in identical Porsche Carrera three-liter racing cars and the six with the most points after Riverside go on to Daytona for the championship next February.

Although the writers favor the road racers, most of those drivers disagree that they have such a huge advantage.

"These cars are so identical and so easy to adjust to, I just don't think we have the edge they think we do," said Follmer, who won two races in Europe this year in similar cars.

Donohue said the poll results were flattering but agrees with Follmer that the oval drivers will adjust very quickly.

"As far as I know, all of them have done a good bit of road racing during their careers, too," Donohue said. "I know I've lost to some of them on road courses."

Sharks battle tough Crusaders

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The undefeated Cleveland Crusaders meet the Los Angeles Sharks tonight at the Sports Arena, where the Sharks have yet to win a game this season.

Cleveland, with one tie and four wins, is tied with New England for first place in the Eastern Division. The Sharks have one win, a 4-1 victory in Vancouver Sunday, and three losses, all at home.

Los Angeles is currently last in the West.

Rams' McMillan believes in himself

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Eddie McMillan had more on his mind than just making the Los Angeles Rams in his rookie NFL season.

"When I came to camp," explained the young defensive back, "I felt I had the ability to start and that's what I planned to do. You have to have faith in yourself."

In six games and six Ram victories, McMillan has been Chuck Knox's regular right cornerback in every contest. In a 24-7 victory over Green Bay last weekend, the Florida State product picked off his third pass interception of the year.

His three interceptions are tops on a club which has 11. Only two have been intercepted against the Rams.

"I can't take all the credit," McMillan said. "There are 11 guys on the defensive team and everyone of them have to carry out their assignments in order for me to get an interception."

"I know it sounds like a cliché but this really is a team game."

Lakers begin two-game trip

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Los Angeles Lakers open a two-game road trip tonight with a meeting with the Houston Rockets, co-leaders of the NBA's Central Division with a 3-3 record.

The Lakers, whose two losses in five games have both been to the Atlanta Hawks, visit Nate Archibald and the Kansas City-Omaha Kings Wednesday before returning home to host the Detroit Pistons on Friday.

A fourth round draft choice, McMillan is one of three new starters in the Rams' defensive secondary this season. And he's the only rookie who has earned a starting assignment from Chuck Knox.

"I know," he remarked "a lot of rookies come to camp with the idea of just making the club. But I think that's negative thinking. You should think positive. You should think you have the ability to beat out the other guy."

If there ever was a positive thinker, it's Knox, the new Ram coach who has motivated a 6-7-1 club of a year ago into a 6-0 start.

McMillan appears to be Knox's kind of player. Physically as well as mentally. He has 4.5 speed in the 40 and 9.6 speed in the 100.

"It feels good to be on a winning team," the 6-foot, 190-pounder smiled. "There's a real togetherness on this club. Everyone helps everybody else."

"In my case, I get help from both the defensive and offensive players. I'm a rookie and I have a lot to learn so I listen to everyone. John Hadl (the quarterback) and Harold Jackson (the wide receiver) give me all kinds of tips."

"For me, it's mainly a matter of acquiring a knowledge of the receivers in the league. I can use all the help I can get."

One of Knox's first stated objectives when he came here in January was to plug the Rams' porous defensive secondary which allowed 20 touchdown passes last year. Cornerbacks McMillan and Charlie Stukes and safeties Dave Elmendorf and Steve Preece have given up six this year.

McMillan has a lot of confidence in his defensive mates. He noted: "We had a meeting after the Dallas game (a 37-31 victory) and decided we would go out against Green Bay and prove we were a good defensive team."

Green Bay finished with six first downs and 63 total yards.

The Rams are at Minnesota Sunday in a battle of the NFL's two unbeaten. The Vikings also have been undefeated and untied in six starts.

"Every game is a tough one," acknowledged the Tampa, Fla., native. "And Minnesota will be tough."

Irish favored over Trojans

NEW YORK (UPI) —Seventh-ranked Notre Dame has been installed a four-point favorite over fifth-ranked Southern California in their traditional battle Saturday, according to the weekly college football odds released today.

The Irish, who will enjoy a home field advantage, haven't beaten the Trojans since 1966. Since then the teams have met six times with Southern California winning four games and two games ending in a tie. Southern Cal has won the last three years.

Schuhmann gets Rodgers' praise

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — Charlie Schuhmann, the former Bonita High star, will get another chance to show his wares Saturday when UCLA hosts California.

The 5-11, 205 pound junior was a more than adequate replacement for James McAlister against Washington State at Spokane.

Schuhmann carried the ball 13 times and gained 105 yards including a 54-yard touchdown run. He is averaging 5.8 yards per carry for the season with 192 yards in 33 carries.

"I was very pleased with Charlie Schuhmann's play," coach Pepper Rodgers told writers Monday at the weekly Southern California Football Writers Luncheon.

"James could barely do better than a slow walk last week," he continued. I really don't think he'll play for at least two more games."

Rodgers also praised halfback Kermit Johnson. "Kermit is as fine a football player game in game out as anybody anywhere," he commented.

The Bruin coach reminded writers that UCLA is coming off four road games in six weeks. "I had to stay away," he jested. "We're the only team in town that has lost a game."

Defensive end Cal Peterson was chosen College Player of the Week. Defensive end Fred Dryer of the Rams was named Pro Player of the Week.

La Verne coach Roland Ortmayer introduced the College Division Player of the Week, middle guard Jeff Button. The 5-9, 200 pound Leo defensive star was credited with 15 unassisted tackles, these assisted tackles and intercepted a pass as the Leopards walked Occidental 31-6.

"I'm not really sure about my size," Button grinned. "Most players lie about it anyway." When asked what class he was in, Button said he had another year of eligibility left. "I'm pretty sure I'm going to play next year," he said.

Ortmayer said the reason Button was moved from linebacker to middle guard was because he was so aggressive and the defensive coach Ben Hines felt the move up front would give him more of a chance for contact.

"He has made 95 tackles in our five games," Ort added.

Quoting the coaches:

CHUCK KNOX, RAMS — "We may be 6-0, but this week we're playing a team (Minnesota) that is 11-0. The Vikings are the only team in the NFL that won all their pre-season games and every regular season game so far."

CRAIG FERTIG, USC — "Our offensive line really gave Pat Haden good protection (against Oregon). For two weeks in a row now we've had the same group of players there. This week we play Notre Dame. The Irish have an outstanding quarterback, two fine halfbacks, a 233 pound fullback, a 248 pound tight end. When we play that Catholic school, it's the closest thing there is to war."

HERB ROBINSON, LOYOLA — "Claremont-Mudd has an outstanding chance to win their conference title. After having played Whittier, Redlands, and the Stags we feel Claremont-Mudd is an excellent team. They're not big, but they're good offensively and defensively and they have two outstanding backs in Billy Nash and Mike Graber. This week we have a bye and then we play St. Mary's. If you think USC has a hard time with a Catholic school like Notre Dame, you should see how it is when Catholic schools play each other."

FOSTER ANDERSEN, CSLA — Well, I've heard the other coaches talk about playing Catholic schools. Cal Lutheran, a parochial school, beat us (32-27) last week. What do you do when you're an atheist?"

Campy should have won MVP

NEW YORK (UPI)—I agree.

Reggie Jackson was the most exciting, the most dangerous performer in the entire World Series by far, but if you ask me who was the most valuable, who was the one guy who killed the Mets, I'd have to say it was skinny little Campy Campaneris.

Some other people seem to share that view, so it looks as if we have a brand new controversy.

What formed the foundation for this one was the announcement immediately following Sunday's World Series finale in Oakland designating Reggie Jackson as the MVP winner of the new car annually awarded by Sport Magazine to the outstanding performer in the series.

"I spoke to more than a dozen newspapermen sitting near me and they named Jackson overwhelmingly," says Dick Schaap, editor of the magazine. "The only one who argued for Campaneris was Tony Kubek, and I think he's prejudiced because he was a short-stop."

Tom Seaver is a pitcher, and he isn't prejudiced. If he was inclined to show any partiality at all, it would be in favor of Reggie Jackson because the Oakland slugger had some very nice things to say about him both during and after the series. But Tom Seaver says he casts his vote for Campaneris.

"He did it for seven games," says Seaver. "Reggie did a great job for them, and when they needed it, but he came on strongest at the end."

Bud Harrelson also goes for Campaneris over Jackson.

"I'm not trying to knock Reggie or demean the tremendous contribution he made for them, but I'd have to put Campaneris first. I think the magazine chose more on personality than anything else. I was on TV with Campy; he's from Cuba and doesn't speak the best English in the world. Reggie is something else completely. Besides being a terrific ballplayer, he has a marvelous personality. Look, I love the guy, but if you ask me my opinion, who I think was the MVP, I say Campaneris."

Schaap denies personality entered into the selection at all. He says Campy's English didn't matter.

Invite Castro

"I heard Campaneris was from Cuba, and if he had won, we were all set to invite Castro from Havana when the car is awarded here Thursday," says the editor.

Actually, the ideal solution would be to award both Jackson and Campaneris cars.

"Can't do that," laughs Schaap. "I remember we ran into a similar situation last spring after the Knicks beat the Lakers for the NBA title. We didn't know whom to give the car to. Someone said we should've given out 12 motorcycles. Willis Reed finally was awarded the car."

The debate over whether Jackson or Campaneris actually was the MVP undoubtedly will go on, but to me the most under-rated player on both sides was Joe Rudi, the A's magnificent left-fielder.

Here is a ballplayer's ballplayer. He simply does an excellent job day in an day out, never tries to add any embroidery and is a pure delight to watch. What's more, he's a gentleman along with everything else.

Joe Rudi hit a nice solid .333 for the series and played leftfield the way he generally does—perfectly.

When it was all over, he walked over to the Mets' quarters to pay his respects.

He hesitated at the door, a bit self-consciously, until one official of the Mets said to him:

"It's okay to go in, Joe. You don't have to be afraid."

Joe Rudi went in.

He chatted with several of the Mets' players, saying to them, "it could've gone either way."

He spoke with Felix Millan and with Tom Seaver.

"You wanna come play for us, Joe?" said Seaver. "You can hit."

Joe Rudi smiled and said nothing.

The way he plays he doesn't really have to say much.

WALNUT — Mt. San Antonio College tailback Teddy Farmer wasn't seriously injured as believed following a collision with another player Saturday night in MSAC's 17-10 loss to Cerritos.

Farmer not seriously hurt

Farmer, the team's leading rusher, was released from Queen of the Valley Hospital in West Covina Saturday night.

"He's pretty sore," said coach Mal Eaton. "But he's up and walking around. We don't know yet if he'll be able to play this week or not."

Farmer apparently suffered bruised ribs in the collision.

Royal Oak's offense takes Derby lead

Royal Oak High, by virtue of a 26-14 win over Sierra Vista last weekend in Hacienda League action, has taken over sole possession of first place in the offensive department of the Pomona Valley Prep Scoring Derby.

The Romans, who are the only one still unbeaten in the valley after five weeks of play, slipped past Alta Loma and Ganesha this week. The Braves and Giants were only able to chalk up six offensive points each in their respective outings and dropped to second and third.

Since Royal Oak gave up 14 points to the Dons and Claremont only allowed Montclair seven points over the weekend, the defending San Antonio League champion Wolfpack claim sole ownership of first place in the defensive department.

The Pack has only allowed an average of 6-2 points per game in five weeks.

Bonita's Richard Ortega held onto his lead in the individual scoring department with 53 points. Ortega added another touchdown to his total as the Bearcats remained undefeated in Hacienda League play with a 19-8 victory over Gladstone. It's the fourth consecutive week Ortega has held the lead in the individual category.

Walnut's Mike Pfeil, who held the scoring lead for the first week of the season, leaped from fifth place to second with his two touchdowns and a two-point conversion in the Mustangs' 29-28 win over Ontario.

Ontario's Roy Jefferson made his first appearance in the top ten this week and holds down the fourth spot after his unbelievable four-touchdown performance against Walnut.

Rodolfo feels good

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Rodolfo Gonzales was knocked out in nine rounds in his first pro fight eight years ago.

But the Long Beach, Calif., lightweight persevered and last year won the World Boxing Council's version of the 135-pound championship.

He makes his second WBC title defense—for a $63,000 purse—next Saturday night at the Sports Arena here against European lightweight champ Antonio Puddu of Italy.

The money is the most, by $21,000, he has ever earned and Gonzales, who will turn 28 on Dec. 16, feels he's finally arrived.

"For some reason," said the soft-spoken Mexican national, "I keep getting stronger as I get older. I feel very good."

Gonzales was a thing of beauty in the ring in stopping Mexico's Chango Carmona for his WBC crown in 13 rounds Nov. 10, 1972. With machine-like precision, he retired Ruben Navarro of Los Angeles last March 17 in his first title defense, halting Navarro in nine rounds.

Jackie McCoy's talented champion has actually been fighting for 13 years. He became an amateur boxer when he was only 14.

The secret, said Gonzales, is keeping in shape.

"I've always taken care of myself," he offered. "If I hadn't, I wouldn't have lasted this long. Boxing is one of the toughest sports there is—if not the toughest. It requires a lot of sacrifice."

"There is so much time and there are so many punches you can take and then it's all over."

Gonzales made his last start last Aug. 30, scoring a third round KO over Donny Sennett. That gave him a 56-5 record with 45 knockouts.

"I guess Puddu is a pretty sharp fighter," said Gonzales. "At least that's what people tell me."

His previous biggest paycheck came for the Navarro fight. He got $42,000.

Rain dampens spirits for Oakland's party

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Intermittent rains dampened spirits a bit as about 70,000 turned out to welcome the World Champion Oakland A's when they paraded through downtown Oakland.

Last year, a quarter-million fans greeted the 1972 World Champions.

"I saw the parade last year," said Stan Cox, a public accountant from nearby Emeryville. "There's very little enthusiasm this year. The players look sullen and bored. Oakland will never be a baseball town and the players know it.

"It wouldn't be like this in New York."

Owner Charlie Finley told the fans that he had three things to say: "The team is not leaving Oakland; the team is not for sale; the greatest friend I've ever had and one of the greatest managers in baseball is Dick Williams." Williams resigned after leading his team to the seven game World Series win.

USC FLANKER Lynn Swann, tabbed by an opposing coach as "the best football player in the nation," is the Pacific Eight Offensive Player of the Week.

Swann won the accolade from Oregon coach Dick Enright after catching five passes for 122 yards in the Trojans' 31-0 pounding of the Ducks.

RECOMMENDATIONS to "modernize" the American League, as well as a list of candidates for president, was presented to club owners today and perhaps they will take immediate action on some phases of the report.

It was regarded as virtually certain the owners would select a new president to re-

Valdez rides five winners at Oak Tree

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI)—On back-to-back Mondays, young Steve Valdez has piled up 11 victories at the Oak Tree at Santa Anita meeting.

The 17-year-old apprentice from El Monte, Calif., rode five more winners here Monday, exactly one week after he equalled the Santa Anita victory record of six triumphs in a single day.

Valdez also recorded his third stakes win in three days, taking the $45,250 Henry P. Russell Handicap aboard Marion R. Frankel's Nevada. He now has a meet-leading 25 victories in 85 mounts at Oak Tree.

"We had a perfect trip all the way," Valdez said of his three-quarter length triumph over El Rhythm. "I saved ground around the first turn and then went to the outside to make sure I wouldn't get trapped down the backstretch. I went on from there."

A Virginia-bred son of Grey Sovereign, Nevada paid $10.60 to win.

Valdez rode his five winners on the next-to-last day he will compete with the benefit of the five-pound apprentice allowance. He also won aboard Charisma Magic ($3.40) in the first race, Prentissness ($4.20) in the third, Busy Chief ($4.80) in the fifth and Early Light ($8.20) in the ninth.

Cubs ready to trade Jenkins to Rangers for youngsters

ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI)—The Texas Rangers have reportedly acquired pitcher Ferguson Jenkins from the Chicago Cubs in a trade that will be announced Friday and are working on a deal to acquire catcher Dave Duncan from the Cleveland Indians.

The trade for Jenkins was apparently consummated during the World Series but can't be announced until Friday when interleague trading officially opens.

The Rangers gave up two unnamed players for Jenkins and it is also believed outfielder Rico Carty and pitcher Mike Paul, who went to the Cubs from the Rangers last season for future considerations, were part of the Jenkins deal.

Jenkins was a 20-game winner for six consecutive seasons starting in 1967. Last year, however, his record was 14-16 with a 3.88 ERA. The 6-foot-5 righthander, who will be 30 in December, has let it be known he wants to be traded from the Cubs.

Officials in Chicago said the Cubs were asking for third baseman Bill Madlock, a 22-year-old rookie, and second baseman Dave Nelson in return for Jenkins.

The Rangers are also interested in acquiring Duncan but officials in Oakland said Sunday during the final World Series games, where all the trading was going on, that the deal fell through because the Rangers refused to give Cleveland Nelson in return for Duncan.

"To my knowledge we haven't shut down any discussions involving Dave Duncan and I don't think Cleveland has either," O'Brien said Monday. "Duncan is a fine receiver who hits with power but by the same token he's not the only catcher available."

O'Brien said the team's trade talks at the World Series were "highly productive" and the team has "at least three that could be termed major deals in the discussion stage." The only completed trade, however, is believed to be the Jenkins deal with Chicago.

O'Brien said he was surprised at the interest shown by other teams in Ranger

Dick Butkus may retire

CHICAGO (UPI)—Chicago Bears linebacker Dick Butkus is considering retiring from professional football because, he says, "I can't perform like I used to."

Butkus said Monday that he's not the same player who vowed to Bears owner George Halas Sr. last July that if he could sign a no-cut, no-trade contract he would lead the Bears to a championship.

"How do I know if I can make it to next week?" said Butkus, in reference to his buckling, battle-torn knees.

The 30-year-old Bears star said he will decide whether to play again next year "before the season ends."

Richardson paid for principles

United Press Telephoto

WHERE IT BEGAN — Elliot Richardson, who resigned as U. S. Attorney general over the weekend, is shown preparing to testify last May before the Senate Judiciary Committee on his nomination. He was appointed by President Nixon to fill the spot vacated by Attorney General John Mitchell in the aftermath of the Watergate scandal. Richardson quit his job after refusing an order from the President to fire Archibald Cox, special prosecutor investigating the Watergate affair.

Justice job was 13th as 'utility man'

By United Press International

Elliot L. Richardson, ex-secretary of defense, ex-secretary of health and welfare, and now ex-attorney general, likes to jokingly despair of ever getting steady work.

Attorney general of the United States was the 13th and latest government post in the last 15 years for the square-jawed, athletic-looking New England Yankee.

By all odds it was the most difficult for Richardson, who at age 53 and said to be harboring thoughts of the presidency was called in to head a Justice Department stained by the Watergate scandal.

Because of his rock-solid credentials in government service, he was billed as the star in a "third" Nixon administration constructed in an effort to help restore public trust in President Nixon.

Taking over a department whose previous occupant, Richard G. Kleindienst, had to quit under fire and whose next previous occupant, John N. Mitchell, was under criminal indictment, Richardson saw his task as one of "purifying" the department and further, he said, "99 and 44-100 per cent pure is not now — if it ever was — good enough."

He would not, he said, sacrifice principle to hold office.

"I have drawn a line in my own mind, beyond which I will not go, and I work hard to avoid being forced over (the line)," he said at the time of his appointment.

Saturday, overruled by President Nixon in the Watergate tapes controversy and subsequent firing of Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox, Richardson found himself forced over the line. He resigned.

A handsome 6-footer born to wealth as a Boston Brahmin, Richardson was graduated from Harvard College and Harvard Law School, then was law clerk to Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter and Federal Judge Learned Hand.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower made Richardson acting secretary of health, education and welfare in 1958 — Richardson was 37 — and thus began a career in politics and government that brought Richardson the lieutenant governorship of Massachusetts and eventually to the Nixon administration as undersecretary of state.

Known as a sharp-minded trouble-shooter who knows how to shape up the administration of a government department, Richardson was often in demand to reorganize this agency or that and thus the many jobs and short tenures 2½ years was the average stay.

Richardson is married to the former Anne Francis Hazard, and the couple has three children. He is an inveterate doodler of exquisite geometric design.

Exchange of letters that overshadowed Presidency

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Following is an exchange of letters Saturday night resulting in the dismissal of Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson, Deputy Attorney General William D. Ruckelshaus and special prosecutor Archibald Cox. The letters are in the order they were released by the White House:

(President Nixon to Richardson)

Dear Elliot: It is with the deepest regret and with an understanding of the circumstances which brought you to your decision that I accept your resignation.

Sincerely,
Richard Nixon
Honorable Elliot L. Richardson
The Attorney General
Justice Department
Washington, D.C.

(Richardson to President Nixon)

The President
The White House
Dear Mr. President:

It is with deep regret that I have been obliged to conclude that circumstances leave me no alternative to the submission of my resignation as Attorney General of the United States.

At the time you appointed me, you gave me the authority to name a special prosecutor if I should consider it appropriate. A few days before my confirmation hearing began, I announced that I would, if confirmed, "appoint a special prosecutor and give him all the independence, authority, and staff support needed to carry out the tasks entrusted to him." I added, "Although he will be in the Department of Justice and report to me — and only to me — he will be aware that his ultimate accountability is to the American people."

At many points throughout the nomination hearings, I reaffirmed my intention to assure the independence of the special prosecutor, and in my statement of his duties and responsibilities, I specified that he would have "full authority" for "determining whether or not to contest the assertion of 'Executive Privilege' or any other testimonial privilege." And while the special prosecutor can be removed from office for "ex-secutor must be discharged, I also pledged that "The Attorney General will not countermand or interfere with the Special Prosecutor's decisions or actions."

While I fully respect the reasons that have led you to conclude that the Special Prosecutor must (be discharged, I trust that you understand that I could not in the light of these firm and repeated commitments carry out your direction that this be done. In the circumstances, therefore, I feel that I have no choice but to resign.

In leaving your Administration, I take with me lasting gratitude for the opportunities you have given me to serve under your leadership in a number of important posts. It has been a privilege to share in your efforts to make the structure of world peace more stable and the structure of our own government more responsive. I believe profoundly in the rightness and importance of those efforts, and I trust that they will meet with increasing success in the remaining years of your Presidency.

Respectfully,
Elliot L. Richardson

(President Nixon to Solicitor General Robert H. Bork)

Dear Mr. Bork:

I have today accepted the resignations of Attorney General Richardson and Deputy Attorney General Ruckelshaus. In accordance with Title 28, Section 508(b) of the United States Code and of Title 28, Section 0.132(a) of the Code of Federal Regulations, it is now incumbent upon you to perform both the duties as Solicitor General, and duties of and act as Attorney General.

In his press conference today Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox made it apparent that he will not comply with the instruction I issued to him, through Attorney General Richardson, yesterday. Clearly the Government of the United States cannot function if employees of the Executive Branch are free to ignore in this fashion the instructions of the President. Accordingly, in your capacity of Acting Attorney General, I direct you to discharge Mr. Cox immediately and to take all steps necessary to return to the Department of Justice the functions now being performed by the Watergate Special Prosecution Force.

It is my expectation that the Department of Justice will continue with full vigor the investigations and prosecutions that had been entrusted to the Watergate Special Prosecution Force.

Sincerely,
Richard Nixon
Honorable Robert H. Bork
The Acting Attorney General
Justice Department
Washington, D.C.

(Bork to Cox)

Dear Mr. Cox: As provided by Title 28, Section 508(b) of the United States Code and Title 28, Section 0.132(a) of the Code of Federal Regulations, I have today assumed the duties of Acting Attorney General.

In that capacity I am, as instructed by the President, discharging you, effective at once, from your position as Special Prosecutor, Watergate Special Prosecution Force.

Very truly yours,
Robert H. Bork
Acting Attorney General
Honorable Archibald Cox
Special Prosecutor Watergate Special Prosecution Force
1425 K Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C.

Cox proved his independence

By United Press International

When Attorney General Elliot Richardson named Archibald Cox as the Special Watergate Prosecutor last May, many people asked whether the college law professor could maintain his independence if the scandal led to President Nixon.

Now, five months later, that question has been answered. When Cox refused to abide by Presidential orders to drop all court proceedings to obtain the White House tapes concerning the Watergate scandal, he was fired.

Cox, a tall, distinguished Harvard law professor whose gray hair is styled in a boyish crew cut, was caught between his public promise to conduct a fully independent investigation and orders from the President to make no further attempts to obtain the secret White House tapes of Watergate related conversations.

But Cox, 61, has a reputation for being a tough, independent man who does not surrender power easily.

President Harry S. Truman learned that in 1952 when Cox quit as chairman of the Korean War Stabilization Board because Truman overruled a decision to cut 40 cents from a coal miners contract.

Ten years later, Cox served as U.S. solicitor general during the Kennedy-Johnson administrations, arguing the position of the United States before the Supreme Court. He addressed the justices as equals and showed no lack of confidence in his ability to present the government's case persuasively before the high court.

Once asked by the late Justice Felix Frankfurter how he expected a complex case to be settled if the Justice Department could not even agree on it, Cox replied: "Oh, Mr. Justice, if the dispute were only inside the Justice Department, I'm sure I could settle it."

A labor law expert, Cox lacked criminal trial experience, but he headed a five-man inquiry into the 1968 student disorders at Columbia University and in 1972 he served as counsel for a commission investigating allegations of bribery and corruption in Massachusetts. Richardson, who once studied law in Cox's classroom, named him for the job of special Watergate prosecutor.

With his Watergate investigation seemingly stymied by orders from the President, Cox finds himself facing a true test of his independence.

As special prosecutor, Cox headed a staff of 90 persons with a budget of $2.8 million and authority to investigate and prosecute the break-in and bugging of the Watergate, illegal campaign contributions, political espionage, "dirty tricks" and corruption. Asked if he intended to resign because of Nixon's orders, he replied: "No, hell, no."

That was the same year Nixon was elected President and Ruckelshaus followed him to Washington. He was appointed an assistant attorney general in John N. Mitchell's Justice Department but he strongly lobbied for a federal agency with the responsibility to protect the environment.

Nixon created that agency in 1970 and Ruckelshaus was its first director.

It was widely reported that Ruckelshaus clashed with former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans in 1972 over the EPA chief's strong attempts to make industry comply with antipollution laws. But Nixon sided with Ruckelshaus.

When L. Patrick Gray withdrew his name from consideration as FBI director — after he had admitted to destroying files at the request of White House counsel John W. Dean — Ruckelshaus took the job.

When Nixon named Clarence Kelley to serve as head of the FBI, Ruckelshaus became deputy attorney general where he has quietly handled criminal matters and allowed Richardson to deal with the Watergate and Agnew crises.

Ruckelshaus is on his own

By United Press International

The upward climb of William Doyle Ruckelshaus has been closely tied to the fortunes of Richard Nixon but there was an independent streak below the surface.

Ruckelshaus has been at Nixon's beck and call as an assistant attorney general, head of the fledgling Environmental Protection Agency, acting director of the FBI and deputy attorney general.

But Ruckelshaus stood up to Nixon Saturday night when Special Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox refused to obey the presidential directive that he end his attempt to get tape recordings relating to the Watergate affair made in Nixon's office. His superior, Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson, resigned.

Ruckelshaus' reaction was described in the terse style of White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler:

"As deputy attorney general, Mr. William Ruckelshaus refused to carry out the

No such thing as a guaranteed pension

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The chairman of a Senate committee investigating retirement plans says "there is no such thing as a guaranteed pension" despite the participation of some two million California workers.

Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Calif., said "Poor investment performance by pension trust funds, particularly those that are not adequately funded, can have disastrous effects on future benefits to be paid to retired workers."

He warned the state may have to act "to insure that no Californian will be robbed of his pension benefits due to mismanagement of pension funds."

Deukmejian's Business and Professions Committee has held two hearings on the operations of private pension plans with a final hearing scheduled for next Wednesday in Los Angeles.

case involved a brickyard worker with 25 years service who lost his entire pension because his employer failed to make contributions to the pension fund.

"The single dominant fact that the committee has discovered so far in its investigation is that there is no such thing as a guaranteed pension," Deukmejian said in a statement.

He said that nearly all pension trust agreements have technical language permitting the end of the trust or reduction or elimination of benefits.

"What this means is that many workers may not get their promised pension rewards if the trustees terminate a pension plan, if the pension plan goes bankrupt or if investment performance does not meet expectations," he added.

The senator said he was considering legislation to correct some of the problems in current law which he said can result in persons suddenly learning the pension they were counting on has been lost.

New Way Found To Stop Hair Loss, Grow More Hair

HOUSTON, Texas — If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss . . . and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done". But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss . . . but is really growing hair!

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in your family," this is certainly no proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. No matter which one is causing your hair loss, if you wait until roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair . . . now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days, at their risk, if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail and without obligation.

Teen forum Make your friendship private one

By JEAN ADAMS

BIG TIME: (Q.) I would do anything for Seth. What he wants me to do is, when we meet in the hall at school, to just say "Hi" to him like I was only a friend, and not act like I am his steady girl friend.

He says he wants to continue to see me after school and on weekends. He is trying to be big time at school this year. He is a senior and plays football. I am just a junior. —Fran in Florida.

(A.) The urge to be a big wheel in high school sometimes overwhelms a boy or girl. It sometimes leads a boy or girl astray. Your friend Seth's ambitions apparently have mixed up his sense of values to some extent.

But the friendship between him and you can be private if both of both of you are willing to make it that way. If the arrangement he wants is acceptable to you, and if you think it is fair and honest, go ahead.

If at any time you feel he is being unfair or dishonest, either in his school activities or with you, drop him at once.

NO SISSY: (Q.) My friends think I'm a sissy. My sister told me this and she doesn't lie to me. I don't know why they think so. I am not gay, nor do I look or talk sissy.

Not long ago my friends and I went to the movies. They all dressed casually, but I had on school clothes. Could this be why? I am also a fairly good diver, and when I dive, I point my toes and try to use good form. Could this be the reason? I am 14. —Accused in Alabama.

(A.) It may be either of the items you mention or something altogether different. You may be sensitive, or highly intelligent, or noticeably thoughtful of others, or fastidious about cleanliness. None of these is sissy, but some boys your age think being rough and tough is the only way to be, and anything the slightest bit different makes them uncomfortable and unsure of themselves, and prone to criticize and pick excuses for their licks.

Be yourself, and look around you for boys more like you. You will find them, although there are not so many as there are of the rough-tough type.

$28 million settlement in drugs case

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—The state has accepted settlement of $28 million from five large drug manufacturers in a suit alleging the companies overcharged Californians for more than a decade, says Attorney General Evelle J. Younger.

The firms were accused of restricting trade and charging too much for antibiotics sold to some 6.5 million residents and the state from 1954-66. They were American Cyanamid, Charles Pfizer and Co., Bristol-Meyers Co., Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp. (Squibb) and Upjohn Co.

The settlement was signed Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Minneapolis-St. Paul, where California joined other states in pressing the action. The suit was originally filed in 1968. The agreed settlement still is subject to final approval by the court.

The suit contended the companies overcharged for a broad spectrum of antibiotics, sold principally under the trade names: Aureomycin, Terramycin, Achromycin, Mystecol, Penalba, Parmycin, Polycycline, Steclin, Tetracycline and Tetrex.

Younger said the public would be notified prior to a court hearing on final approval of the settlement. He also said residents would be told how to make claims. Two years ago, about 6.5 million persons were notified they may have been overcharged.

California earlier rejected a settlement offer of $10.4 million from the companies.

Equalization board rejects pact for Nixon appraisal

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—The state Board of Equalization today refused to approve a proposed contract with Orange County to appraise the value of President Nixon's Western White House property at San Clemente.

The board objected to provisions in a "draft agreement" offered by the county which members said would prevent state appraisers from performing a "honest" appraisal.

The Democratic-dominated board directed its legal staff to negotiate with the Orange County Board of Supervisors and return later—possibly next week—with an acceptable contract.

Member George Reilly said to approve the proposal without revision would be to "start right off the bat with something that is phoney. Either they want an audit honestly done or they don't."

The President's seaside villa was appraised at $1.3 million by Orange County Assessor Jack Vallarga. However, critics have charged the figure was too low.

William Bennett, chairman of the state board, said the appraisal should have totaled more than $2.8 million. Robert Battin, an Orange County supervisor, said he should have been appraised at $2.3 million.

After a long series of back and forth actions between the state board and local officials, the Orange County supervisors earlier this month voted to ask the state board to perform the appraisal and authorized a contract to carry it out.

The state board's attorney, Charles Ottermann, told the board some provisions of the proposed agreement constituted "roadblocks."

Bennett and Reilly took specific exception to a provision they said would deny state appraisers access to confidential records of the Orange County assessor. They said another clause declared that the assessor would not be "involved in this proceeding."

"Well, that's ridiculous," Bennett told newsmen. "He's in it up to his neck."

Reilly told fellow board members, "If they are going to tie our hands, we are not going to do an honest, decent job."

Bennett said he also wanted assurance that the final contract would include the "entire" Nixon property of approximately 25 acres. He added he was confident state agents would be admitted to the property for an on-site inspection.

An informal report complied by the Board's staff had estimated the cash value of the property at $2.9 million.

The controversy over the value of the President's property has swirled for months. At the center of the storm is whether improvements made in the name of security should be taxed because they increased the property's market value.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS CALLING FOR BIDS

Notice is hereby given that the Walnut Valley Unified School District of Los Angeles County, California, acting by and through its Governing Board hereinafter referred to as the "District" will receive up to but not later than 10:00 A.M. Wednesday, November 7, 1973, sealed bids for the award of a contract for carpeting 19 portable classrooms.

Bids will be received in the office of the Assistant Superintendent, Fiscal and Facilities Management, District, 478 S. Lemon Road, Walnut, California, 91789, and shall be opened and publicly read aloud at the above stated time and place.

All bids shall be made on a bid form furnished by the District.

Each bid must conform and be responsive to the specifications, copies of which are now on file and may be obtained at the office of said Assistant Superintendent, Fiscal and Facilities Management, District, at the above address.

Each bid shall be accompanied by the security referred to in the contract documents and the list of proposed subcontractors.

The District reserves the right to reject any and all bids or to waive any irregularities or informality in any bids or on the bidding.

The District has determined the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which this work is to be performed for each craft or type of workman needed to execute the contract to be as follows:

Base Rate Per Hour	Classification	H&W	PP	VP
$8.14	Carpet, Linoleum, and Soft Tile Layer	37	28	44
$5.495	Laborer-General or Construction	35	1.10	30

(H&W — Health & Welfare; PP — Pension Plan; VP — Vacation Plan)

The foregoing schedule of per diem wages is based upon a working day of eight (8) hours. The rate for holidays and overtime work shall be at time and one-half.

It shall be mandatory upon the Contractor to whom the contract is awarded upon any subcontractor under him, to pay not less than the said specified rates to all workmen employed by them in the execution of the said contract.

No bidder may withdraw his bid for a period of forty-five (45) days after the date set for the opening of bids.

The opening night performance will be Donizetti's "Anna Bolena," starring Beverly Sills. Curtains at 8:30. Also on the 14-opera schedule are Strauss' "Ariadne auf Naxos," Nov. 15 at 8 p.m. and Nov. 25 at 2 p.m.; Bizet's "Carmen" at 8 p.m. Nov. 16, 20 and 24; Donizetti's "Roberto Devereaux" at 2 p.m. Nov. 17; Puccini's "La Boheme" at 8 p.m. Nov. 17 and 25; Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" at 8 p.m. Nov. 18 and 23; Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier" at 8 p.m. Nov. 19 and Dec. 3; Puccini's "Tosca" at 8 p.m. Nov. 27 and Dec. 2.

Symphony to perform in Claremont

CLAREMONT — The Utah Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Maurice Abravanel, will present a concert at Bridges Auditorium of the Claremont Colleges Nov. 9 at 8:15 p.m.

The ensemble has performed to critical acclaim in Athens, Belgrade, Berlin, London, Vienna and other musical capitals, and toured Central and Latin America under the sponsorship of the U.S. State Department in 1971.

Recordings have also helped establish the orchestra's international reputation. Distributed worldwide on 30 labels, the 75 long-playing recordings it has made have sold over a million copies.

The concert will be the first event in the 43rd Artist Course Series at Claremont. Other attractions will include the Waverly Consort, pianist Alfred Brandel, and the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra under the direction of Zubin Mehta.

Tickets for the Utah Symphony Orchestra or for the series are available at Ticketron, Mutual and Liberty agencies, and at Bridges Auditorium box office.

Psoriasis Foundation schedules meeting

WEST COVINA — The San Gabriel Valley Chapter of the National Psoriasis Foundation will hold a "Get Acquainted Night" Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Queen of the Valley Hospital auditorium. The meeting is open to the public.

Citrus band names officers

AZUSA — David Petrie of Monrovia has been named student director of the 64-piece Citrus College concert band. Paul Schlosser of Glendora is associate student director.

Other officers recently elected for the 1973-74 season are Dave Hillburg, Claremont, president; Larry Thatcher, Azusa, vice president; Sandy Britt, Claremont, publicity chairman; Dixon James, Azusa, treasurer; Angel Flores, Azusa, secretary; Joel Nichols, Claremont, music librarian, and Jerry Downs, Bradbury, properties manager.

City of Hope official will address chapter

Mel Heininger, executive coordinator of the City of Hope Medical Center, will address the Thursday meeting of Claremont-Montclair Chapter of City of Hope.

The 8 p.m. meeting will be at The Pines, 9550 Fremont Ave., Montclair.

He will show slides of the latest medical reports of the hospital and discuss the New Horizons program at the hospital.

During the business meeting, plans for a tour to City of Hope, the Plaza Bazaar and a holiday party will be presented.

Mrs. Kathryn Wilson will be the meeting hostess. The public is invited to attend the program.

Rummage sale set for Thursday

A variety of items originally valued at more than a million dollars will be sold at the Pasadena Auxiliary of Boys Republic rummage sale at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium on Thursday.

Marking the 116th semi-annual sale of the auxiliary, the event will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. All proceeds go to Boys Republic, Pomona. As a result of the sale last year Boys Republic was able to purchase an air-conditioning and heating plant for its dining room and kitchen and air conditioning for several classrooms.

Ask Dr. Brothers

Could be misled

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: Through an error at my child's school she discovered that she has an IQ that is slightly below normal. Ever since she learned this, she has been depressed and simply refuses to try anything unless she's absolutely sure she can win or succeed. My husband and I have also noticed that she seems to be dropping some of her old school friends because she says she's afraid they don't like her. It's as if she's so afraid of being hurt by others that she wants to run away from everything.

We're afraid that she'll want to drop out of school and we feel that would be disastrous. Can you suggest anything that might help this situation? — R. M.

..Dear R. M.: I think it might help if you talk with your daughter and help her to face her anxieties directly with a candid discussion about intelligence tests and what they mean.

She will be interested in knowing that experts say that IQ scores are not closely related to a person's success or failure in life. While the results may be reasonably accurate, there have been many studies showing that the results of these tests can change. The results simply do not mean all that they might seem to, especially if they are not interpreted by an expert. In some cases, individuals have managed to adjust their IQ levels as much as 30 points between tests, and 30 points could mean the difference in a reading from normal to gifted, or lift the individual from a category of near-retarded to normal.

Dr. Jerome Sattler feels that instead of a measure of raw intelligence, tests should be considered a combination of "achievement and ability to succeed," even though many people with relatively poor IQs succeed while those with unusually high IQs may fail.

Having a high IQ score definitely does not guarantee a place on the honor roll or a high-paying job in a professional career, and it certainly doesn't assure happiness. Mental hospitals are full of persons who score well on IQ tests.

What is important in your daughter's life now is that she does not turn this IQ score into a self-fulfilling prophecy. We know that what we expect of ourselves and what others expect of us, to a large extent, determines what we do and what we become. If we have high expectations, we are much more apt to do well at whatever task we try.

Try to teach your daughter that we all learn through a process of trying and failing and trying again. This is just as true of geniuses as it is of individuals with average intelligence. Albert Einstein tried and failed many times throughout his life. So did every other great inventor and innovator.

Overcoming a fear of rejection takes hard work, but it begins with honesty. A person fearful of rejection feels he is not a very valuable or likable person. Dr. David Forrest, a psychiatrist, points out that a person can't overcome his fear of being rejected if he rejects others. It's important to learn to be open with others and when you feel you are being rejected, to try to mix with people, rather than withdraw and nurse the feeling of hurt and rejection.

Your daughter needs to have her ego boosted and you, as a parent, can help her in this. She has been hurt and needs to learn to love and appreciate herself in order to appreciate and feel warm toward others. The ability to love and be loved has nothing to do with an IQ test. That is still what makes the world go 'round.

Your daughter's experience is a major reason why it is considered unwise for a child to have knowledge or his or her IQ.

Sporting with sports

By JOSEPH FIRMAN

With any luck, the baseball season will end today. We hope. (Never say "hopefully," gentle reader — it's illiterate and cheap.)

Then the sports aficionado can eliminate the game of rounders from the lavish schedule of football, basketball, tennis, hockey, golf, bowling and auto racing that keeps him glued to the tube, threatening an otherwise rewarding marriage between two consulting adults.

Next to basketball season, which begins in early September and ends early September, baseball offers the longest and dullest program since the invention of the athletic supporter.

Since those long ago days when my father took my brothers and me to Yankee Stadium to see Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig batter the bleacher seats, I have been an ardent baseball fan, closely following the rise and fall of the N. Y. Yankees, watching the leagues expand, players come and go (I remember when Joe DiMaggio made his debut), Boston going to Milwaukee to Atlanta, Philadelphia moving to Kansas City then Oakland, Washington to Texas, Brooklyn to Los Angeles, the Giants to San Francisco—and so on in a kaleidoscopic, merry-go-round of musical cities.

It's all become a drag, a major league pain in the bullpen. There are too many teams, too many divisions, and too many ultimate, final, conclusive series. How long can the average American be "up" (or even interested) in "big games" and "decisive series"? What was wrong with eight teams in each league and the winners played each other?

Football has the saving grace of being played only on weekends—plus college football and the Monday night game-of-the-week. But it is also over-expised, and the Super Bowl will find a lot of sports fans watching the roller derby.

Ennui-wise, basketball is the greatest offender of all. Sweaty athletics in their underwear race up and down interminable and identical courts every night of the week, ending the season finally in "playoffs" which stretch out longer than the season. By the time of the last excruciating, vital, all-important, sufficient, and a surfeit leads to empty stadiums and switched-bowling for dollars.

When are sports and that all-devouring, insatiable monster, television, going to realize that the appetites of millions of sports fans are not limitless, that some is fine, a lot is suff-off TV sets as sure as baby throw up when he gorges himself off TV sets as sure as a baby throws up when he gorges himself on candy.

Hand me my bib.

The doctor comments

Reader's controlling blood pressure well

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 75 years old and have been troubled with high blood pressure for over 42 years, the pressure goes up to 210-110, and at other times it drops to 140-60. When I go shopping for the full day it drops to 135-60. When it drops so low I have a very uncomfortable feeling. I am taking Aapresoline, Inderol and Aldomet.

Will you please let me know what to do to stabilize the pressure? I am sending along a list of my pressures taken over a month's time.

DEAR READER — Actually you are doing very well. In 16 out of 19 readings the diastolic (low) reading was below 80. There were only two readings above 90. Actually 17 of your high readings (systolic) were 150 or above with only two of these over 180. If all people in your age bracket with elevated blood pressure could be controlled that well, we would be very happy with our treatment.

You probably have lost part of the normal elasticity of your aorta, the large artery that carries all the oxygenated blood out of the heart to the body after it returns to the lungs. When this happens it takes more pressure to provide circulation.

If you try to blow up a balloon it is fairly simple, but if you try to blow up an inner tube it takes more pressure. Why? Because the inner tube is less elastic. As the large aortic artery hardens it takes more pressure to force the blood out into it, and, hence, the top blood pressure reading tends to rise. No amount of medicine for high blood pressure is really going to help this problem, and if you lower the pressure too much then you won't have effective circulation. Fainting and symptoms of fainting occur when the blood pressure is too low to maintain good circulation. In other words, for you it is necessary to have at least a high normal blood pressure to have good circulation.

When you stand up, the small arteries in the lower part of the body constrict through reflexes to prevent too much blood from pooling in the legs and causing fainting. High blood pressure medicines make these reflexes sluggish and sometimes cause too much lowering of the blood pressure when you stand. This may be a factor in your low pressures during long shopping trips.

I do have a suggestion you can talk to your doctor about. To prevent these low pressures when you are up for a long time, why not try a pair of support hose or elastic banddage around the legs. It could help prevent the accumulation of blood in the legs and may eliminate these lower readings and uncomfortable feeling. If your doctor has you try it let me know how it works for you.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, in care of The Progress-Bulletin, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. For a copy of Dr. Lamb's booklet on cholesterol, send 50 cents to the same address and ask for "Cholesterol" booklet.

Robber finds fifth time doesn't pay

NEW YORK (UPI) —Police said the robber apparently thought he had a good thing going. For the past four Sundays he had held up Baur's Pastry Shop at gunpoint and escaped with $300.

This Sunday, however, detectives arrested him as he walked out. They shot him in the shoulder when he pulled his gun, but he began running and was only captured after he tripped and fell.

"I guess he just figured it was an easy hit," said detective Roy Pena. "After all, it worked four times in a row and he got $1,200 out of it."

Police said a clerk told them that the suspect, Charles Williams, 23, New York, was the same man who had been there the previous weeks.

looking for new job

KINGSBRIDGE, England (UPI) —Britain's oldest cinema usherette, 86-year-old Emily Wood, is job-hunting.

Next Saturday, the theater where she has worked for 40 years closes down. She guided people to their seats at the first film shown in the theater. "It's been my life going to the cinema most nights since my husband was killed in the first world war," she said.

special someone. Seek a quiet place, atmosphere and soft music.

Your Birthday Oct. 24

You'll have some very profitable ideas this year. Be sure not to waste them. Keep a suitcase ready for the short trips you'll be impulsively taking.

Doctor tests fig leaf; it's rough

LONDON (UPI) —If Adam really wore a fig leaf, a British doctor said today, then he had real problems.

Dr. Thomas Smith wore one himself as a test of the old story, and reported that a fig leaf has a ... well, its ... its rough like sandpaper on the underside.

"I tied the leaf around my waist with a piece of string and I was most surprised at my findings," he said.
